Yalta Dicker with Stalin Bared

Washington, D. C., March 29 (AP)—As the result of a secret agreement by the Big Three at Yalta, Russia and the United States will ask for three votes each in the allied assembly to be proposed at the San Francisco security conference next month.

The White House made this bombshell announcement today. It immediately threatened a split in the American delegation to the conference. It seemed likely also to become a focal point of small nation opposition to big power domination of the international organization.

The possibility of a split appeared in a statement by Sen. Vandenberg [R., Mich.], a member of the delegation, who said:

"I would deeply disagree with any voting proposal, if made, which would destroy the 'sovereign equality of nations' in the peace league's assembly, as previously proposed at Dumbarton Oaks."

A Trade with Stalin

The initial proposal for more than one seat in the assembly came from Premier Stalin at Yalta, the White House announcement disclosed.

President Roosevelt agreed to support the plan, provided the United States also should have three assembly seats, and Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill assented to this.

No reason for this Russian move was given. Diplomatic officials speculated that it probably was prompted by a desire of Moscow to have a representation approaching that of the British empire. The empire would have six seats for the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, India, New Zealand, and South Africa.

The controversial development was the second of Russian origin to explode on the pre-conference scene today. The first was a Moscow announcement that the soviet delegation would be headed by the ambassador to Washington, Andrei A. Gromyko.

Choice Is Unexplained

All the other powers have announced that their delegations would be headed by their foreign secretaries—among them Secretary Stettinius for the United States and Secretary Eden for Britain.

The appointment of Gromyko instead of Foreign Commissar Molotov was, like the multiple vote proposition, unexplained. One suggestion was that the appointment of a man of ambassadorial rank showed a declining soviet interest in the conference.

This came up when Gromyko talked briefly with reporters following the Moscow announcement. "That is a false conclusion," he said flatly. He said his government unqualifiedly supports the Dumbarton Oaks plan for world security organization and also the Yalta agreement on voting procedure in the proposed world security council. At that time the Yalta agreement on assembly voting had not been announced.

11 Nations in Council

The world organization would have three main bodies: the secur-

Vets Battle 'Evaders' for Dodge Jobs

Charges that the Dodge Chicago plant of the Chrysler corporation has become a haven for thousands of draft dodgers who took jobs under the "work or fight" ultimatum were shouted last night by indignant spokesmen of 3,700 veterans of World War II. employed in the plant, which makes engines for the B-29s.

Reports that the management planned a lay-off of some veterans tomorrow prompted 150 representatives of the veterans to meet in a hall at 6908 S. Western av. The veterans asserted that many of them face discharge because they hold less seniority than the nonveterans who took jobs to avoid induction.

Shouts, 'We'll Help Ourselves"

The veterans members of the United Automobile, Aircraft, and Agricultural Implement Workers' union [CIO], local 274, listened impatiently, altho courteously, for five minutes to William Kulp, international representative in charge of the CIO veterans' division, before one shouted, "Don't waste our time! You are not doing anything for us. We will help ourselves!"

More than one-half of the 30,000 employes of the Super Fortress engine building plant were labeled by the veterans as "goldbricks who never have done a lick of work in their lives and are not doing a lick now." In the last year the big plant has had 126 strikes, many of them for trivial reasons.

John Ford, 4638 Altgeld st., a veteran of 34 months of service, some of it overseas, asserted the plant is full of bookmakers, poker game dealers, shoe clerks, insurance salesmen, and others from noncritical occupations, and wives of many such "dodgers and goldbricks."

Asks Why U. S. Doesn't Act

"There's millions of goldbricks thruout the country, and especially in this Dodge plant," Ford said. "Why doesn't the government find out the kind of civilian it wishes to freeze in jobs, while veterans are looking for jobs or trying to hold those they have?

"If veterans are being displaced in favor of goldbricks now, what can those now wallowing in blood and battle field filth expect when the war is over?" Ford asked.

Ford said the majority of the veterans in the plant were wounded or weakened by malaria or other service connected diseases. Because of lack of seniority, he said, most of them have been relegated to 87 cent an hour jobs and transferred to night shift hours, which tend to aggravate their ailments.

"Never Worked and Don't Work"

"It's too bad reporters cannot work side by side with us in the plant and observe for themselves how little work is being performed by these big fat bookies and the guys who come to work in their good clothes," Ford said. "They boast they have never worked and they are not doing any work now."

One veteran shouted that the insurance salesmen employed in the plant are "selling policies on the side."

The meeting climaxed an eight month fight by the veterans to obtain from their own UAW union protection from layoffs. Emphasizing they had no fight with the UAW, they appointed a committee of 10, headed by Ford, to confer today with Joseph Mattson, regional UAW director. They gave him a "last chance" to rally the union behind them and save their jobs. If he refuses to do so, Ford said the veterans will act independently to avert the layoffs.

GOOSE EGGS WITHOUT GOLD IN THEM SELL FOR 75 CENTS APIECE

New York, March 29 (AP)—The goose that laid those golden eggs would have been a piker in New York today.

Ordinary goose eggs without a speck of gold in them were selling for 75 cents apiece—which would have amounted to $9 a dozen if a dozen could have been found.

But dealers had only feathers left after hundreds of shoppers acted on a tip from the New York mercantile exchange that goose eggs were nice for Easter.

Those who shopped early found goose eggs four times the size of a hen's product and also found that there is no ceiling price on goose eggs.

IF YOU FLY HIGH YOUR DENTURES MAY GROW LOOSE

The journal of the American Dental association reported in the current issue that reduced atmospheric pressure at high altitudes makes it difficult to keep false teeth in place.

Four naval officers at the air station at Jacksonville, Fla., reported that much less force was required to dislodge the dentures at 30,000 feet than at sea level.

The experiments were conducted with upper plates, but they said it appeared logical that atmospheric pressure would have a like effect on retention of lower dentures.

Widow Talks; Two Hunted in Gang Slaying

Police last night hunted Paul Labriola and Martin [the Ox] Ochs for questioning in the slaying earlier in the day of Maurice Barad, 39, robber paroiee and racketeer. Barad's body was found, shot twice thru the head, on the grounds of the Mohawk Country club, Irving Park rd., west of Bensenville in Du Page county.

Maurice Barad

Labriola has a police record dating back to June, 1934, when he was sent to Joliet prison for robbery. He was paroled 18 months later. Since then he has been arrested many times as a suspect in jewel robberies and shootings. His father, who had the same name and was a 19th ward political leader, was slain in 1921. Labriola and Ochs were arrested three years ago as suspect. in an $1,800 robbery near Wausau, Wis.

Widow Gives Statement

The search for the pair began after the victim's widow, Mrs. Florence Jackson Barad, 38, told Detectives Timothy O'Connell, Edward Witrey, and John Glon that the two men came to the home of her father-in-law, Abe Barad, of 1651 S. Ridgeway av., Wednesday night and took her husband away with them.

Chief of Detectives Walter G. Storms also is investigating charges made by Mrs. Barad in an 11 page statement on gangland crimes, including one murder and another shooting. Mrs. Barad was under police protection at her home at 427 Roslyn pl. last night because she said that she feared for her life.

Mrs. Barad and her husband were questioned last August in the gang killing of Lawrence [Dago] Mangano, west side gambler and racketeer. Labriola is a stepson of Mangano.

Tells of Ross Murder

Mrs. Barad told police that on the night that Eddie Ross, alias English, a jewel thief, was slain in his apartment at 444 St. James pl., 16 months ago, Labriola came to her home wearing a bloodstained shirt and said: "I just killed English Eddie; you'll read about it in the papers."

Labriola was arrested as a suspect in the Ross murder, but was released after a lie test failed to implicate him.

Mrs. Barad also told the police that she believed Labriola was involved in the shooting of Peter [Mibs] Gallichio, a handbook operator and hoodlum, who was seriously wounded and robbed of a $3,000 diamond a year ago. The shooting occurred a block from her millinery store near Diversey pkwy. and Clark st.

Victim Put in Sanitarium

"Labriola came running into my flat and asked to borrow a car, saying that he had just shot Mibs," Mrs. Barad said. Gallichio, who was shot thru the head, was later placed in a sanitarium.

Mrs. Barad reiterated that she did not know Dago Mangano's slayers. Mangano was suspected of being implicated in the hijacking of a truckload of cigarets. Mrs. Barad was indicted and is now awaiting trial as an accomplice.

Barad's police record dates back to 1926 when he was arrested for carrying a revolver and burglar tools. In 1934 he was sentenced to one year to life for armed robbery and was paroled in September, 1942. He had been employed at a war plant in Cicero for the last six weeks.

Mrs. Barad said that they were married a year ago and that Labriola was angry because she had not married him.

She was later escorted by the police to the home of her father-in-law to make arrangements for the funeral. There she told her brother-in-law—Joseph Barad, a sailor in the navy—that she had pleaded with her husband not to go with the two men in the car.

"I'll do anything to avenge his death," she asserted. "I have paid more than $20,000 to the gang to protect him."

British Fleet Joins Attack on Ryukyus

GUAM, March 30 [Friday]—(AP)—The Pacific fleet, augmented by a British battleship-carrier task force, poured shells and carrier planes for the seventh straight day Thursday at the Ryukyus, Adm. Nimitz reported today.

He disclosed that Japanese planes and torpedo boats tried to deal blows at the attacking warships Tuesday night, during which four of the planes and "a number" of the boats were destroyed. There was no mention of any damage to the American fleet.

Nimitz disclosed earlier that the 35,000 ton battleship King George V., the 23,000 ton carrier Illustrious, and other British warships attacked the southern end of the island chain Monday and Tuesday.

Twenty Jap Planes Destroyed

Nimitz' bulletin disclosed that 20 Japanese aircraft and one small coastal vessel were destroyed and several damaged. The town of Ohama in the Saki group, southwest of Okinawa, main island of the Ryukyus, was left aflame.

The British task force is commanded by Vice Adm. Bernard Rawlings, with Rear Adm. Philip Vian in command of the carriers—under operational control of the American 5th fleet chief, Adm. Spruance.

The British never before have attempted such a long range strike in the Pacific or anywhere else.

"Have Different Job"

One senior British officer said he was "proud to be connected with the mighty American fleet," adding:

"We have a different job to perform, but we will be guided by American experience in the Pacific."

Tying in with the operations along the south approaches to Japan, Gen. McArthur announced today at Manila that his planes bombed a factory, an airdrome, and trains on Formosa, and sank a 7,000 ton cargo ship and five coastal vessels offshore.

Tokyo reported that at least 500 carrier planes had pounded southern Japan for 10 hours yesterday. They concentrated on targets that included the Sasebo and Kure naval bases in what the enemy insisted "must be considered part of a strategic plan to support the Okinawa operation."

Japan has claimed for days that the Americans were preparing to invade Okinawa, largest of the land on Okinawa, largest of the Ryukyus, and already had invaded Aka and Tokashiki Islands in the Ryukyus.

B-29s Raid Singapore

Washington, D. C., March 29 (AP)—Forty India based Super Fortresses struck Singapore again today, blasting oil supplies in this crossroads of the Japanese empire. This is the third time this month that it has been hit. Results of the raid are not yet available.

B-29s Bomb Tokyo: Berlin

LONDON, March 30 [Friday] (AP)—The German radio quoted a Tokyo broadcast today as saying 150 American Super Fortresses bombed Tokyo this morning. There was no immediate confirmation. Berlin said the raiders struck at 7:30 a. m. [Tokyo time], dropping a new type of incendiary bomb which started numerous fires.

The 'Meanest War Fraud'

New York, March 29 [Special]—For the last six years Dr. Abraham Freitag, 58, Brooklyn physician, has been held in high esteem by his fellow Americans for his contribution to the war program.

In 1939 he invented an improved type of bandage. By cutting material on the bias, in relation to weave, he produced a bandage that fits a wound more snugly.

The army, navy, and coast guard ordered large quantities of Dr. Freitag's improved bandages and he turned out more than 1,000,000 yards of them. Medical journals and high army surgeons lauded his invention.

Today Dr. Freitag was accused of having turned his bandage project into what was termed the "meanest war fraud." Criminal informations filed in federal court charged him with having fraudulently used his priorities to obtain nearly 3,000,000 yards of bandage material which he sold into the black market. Bandage cotton was converted into aprons, dresses, and handkerchiefs, it was alleged, at a profit of about $500,000 to the supposedly patriotic doctor.

"This fraud was operated in 1942, 1943, and part of 1944, when casualty lists were mounting," declared United States Atty. John F. X. McGohey, "and the offender ought to have been conserving medical supplies instead of aiding the black market."

Named with Dr. Freitag in the charges were his two firms, the Bias Coating corporation and the Bias Coaters company, and Harry Washer, 71, of Brooklyn, who allegedly was his contact with the black market. If the government proves its charges Dr. Freitag faces a possible sentence up to 89 years and fines exceeding his profit by about $150,000.

PATTON DRIVES HALF WAY ACROSS WAIST OF REICH

GERMANS WAVE AND SMILE AS YANKS PASS BY

BY JOHN THOMPSON
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

WITH A U. S. ARMORED DIVISION, On the Road to Berlin, March 28 [Delayed]—Riding with these tank columns brings you to the war of movement at its fastest. We have conquered so many towns, some by fights, scores more by just riding thru them, that no one can keep count. And it is seldom without excitement.

A few hours before our fast column pulled into the village of Schonbach, Lt. James L. Keown of Mount Vernon, Ind., executive officer of a headquarters company, and six men were looking around the town. Some German soldiers popped out of a basement.

Keown wiggled his machine gun, discouraging the two officers from running, and in half an hour he had 30 or 40 prisoners. Another one came sauntering up the road where our jeep was parked.

Civilians Wave Handkerchiefs

Many German civilians were glad to see us, lending support to stories from elsewhere that the civilian population has been urging German soldiers to surrender and halt the costly war. Often they wave their handkerchiefs and try to smile. Hordes of foreign laborers now packing up to go home are happy.

Last night we moved in on one German family without much ceremony. Altho they gave up their beds and had to sleep on the stone floor they observed all the "correct formalities" much to our amazement.

In the living room were the photographs of four sons in German army uniforms. Yet the pretty daughter tripped upstairs with a load of fresh bed linens, many smiles, and a "thank you."

Worse than War

In the house selected for headquarters the women went into a dither when told they would have to get out. Thinking they were being evacuated forever they flounced about grabbing all their clothes and heaping hampers until the chief of staff started tearing out his hair.

"Tell them," he shouted, "that we are only going to be here one night and tell them they have 15 minutes to get out and find a bed with a neighbor. This is worse than war."

Lt. Robert W. Nollenberger of Glendale, Cal., is liaison officer for the infantry, which is supporting the tank drive. They call Nollenberger the "Liberator," for in the process of his liaison activities he has taken 23 prisoners and four towns all by himself.

"The civilians were standing beside their houses waving and holding up German pistols they had taken from soldiers, offering them to us," he said.

U. S. Troops Seize Frankfurt and Mannheim

PARIS, March 30 (Friday)—(AP)—Tanks of Lt. Gen. Hodges' United States 1st army, scattering all resistance on a dazzling 55-mile sweep, roared up within 186 miles west of Berlin yesterday and all but cut the Ruhr basin from the rest of Germany, thereby robbing the enemy of his last great source of war material.

The British 2d army, racing across the north German plain under a news blackout, was at least 41 miles east of the Rhine by last account and was within less than 65 miles of a junction with the 1st army. Between the two armies were thousands of Germans in disordered flight.

Patton Drives Eastward

Lt. Gen. Patton's United States 3d army slashed almost half-way across Germany's waist with a 20-mile eastward surge that netted a total of 14,000 prisoners, a record for one day.

At last reports it was within 198 miles of Berlin, but the German radio said the 3d army's 4th armored division had driven at least 12 miles farther on and was within less than 100 miles of the border of Czechoslovakia.

All Germany's great western cities were toppling into allied hands. The 3d army had Frankfurt, the reich's ninth largest with a population of 546,000. Lt. Gen. Simpson's United States 9th army had Duisburg, population 431,000 and Europe's biggest inland river port, almost in the bag. Lt. Gen. Patch's 7th army captured Mannheim, population 283,000.

Cut Ruhr Rail Line

The Germans, by their radio accounts, wrote off as lost the entire Ruhr, with such manufacturing cities as Essen, greatest munitions center of all Europe; Hamm, with the largest freight yards in Germany; Dortmund, Duesseldorf, and Muelheim.

The 1st army cut one of the most important railways from Essen to Berlin as well as a super highway, leaving only two railways still open out of the Ruhr to the capital.

[Luxemburg radio said the British had entered the Westphalian capital of Muenster, cutting one of these railways. There was no confirmation, but British tanks were only 17 miles away when the news blackout was clamped on.]

Longest Gain in One Day

The United States 1st army reeled off the longest gain ever made in a single day on the western front, sweeping around the headwaters of the Ruhr river, and completely outflanking the vital production center.

Running roughshod thru demoralized German defenses, Hodges' columns knifed to a point 10 miles south of Paderborn, 43 miles east of Hamm, rear door of the Ruhr. This put the 1st army only 67 miles south-rest of Hannover, which is 142 miles from Berlin.

A dispatch from the field near Paderborn said American armor was rolling on with nothing in front to hold it.

Canadian forces at the northwestern corner of the trans-Rhine front found opposition wilting as they battled inside Emmerich, German river port and ferry point. [The Luxemburg radio said Emmerich had fallen to the Canadians.]

Against this push threatening to shear off the enemy V-bomb nests of northwestern Holland, the enemy was bringing up troops to the Nijmegen area from western Holland.

Germans Try to Flee

The British breakthru on the Westphalian plain was scattering before it German troops who were trying to get away in any vehicle available. British 2d army tanks, with United States infantry men astride them, were covering as much as 20 miles in a single day, a front dispatch said.

Lt. Gen. Dempsey had shaken loose his veterans on the best tank terrain since they "blitzed" the Afrika corps of the late Field Marshal Erwin Rommel in North Africa.

Haltern fell early to British armor which swept forward six miles in 10 hours and it already is far in the rear of the British spearheads. Borken was the prize of a 20 mile northeastward overnight plunge by units of the 7th armored "Desert Rats" of the African campaign. Bocholt was tougher, but now it too is well behind the farthest northward advance.

All semblance of organized resistance disappeared in the British sector, days ago, but occasional small detachments are trying to pull out of the area north of the British bridgehead and show fight when they collide with the swift thrusts of armor and motorized infantry.

No Sign of Battle Line

No battle line as such exists on the British front. Despite occasional thunder of artillery and the crack of snipers' rifles, the picture of war here is one of endless columns of equipment carrying men and weapons forward. In the path of the British spearhead were Muenster, Hannover, and Osnabruecke.

The 21st army group—the Canadian 1st, British 2d, American 9th, and 1st allied air borne armies—captured 5,000 prisoners on Wednesday.

Run Up White Flag

The rag-tag defenders of Duisburg ran up the white flag before the 431,000, ran up the white flag before the charge of Simpson's United States 9th army veterans.

The 79th infantry division then reached the Rhine canal running thru the city and swarmed over the entire dock area.

Seven miles to the northeast another combat team hit the outskirts of Sterkrade, six miles from the great industrial city of Essen.

The 35th infantry division, striking straight east across the northern Ruhr, reached Gladbeck, seven miles north of Essen.

Other elements six miles to the north captured the rail and highway center of Dorsten in what was described as a broad advance.

Hodges' 1st army tank columns speared thru Langwiesse, 49 miles southeast of Hamm, eastern exit of the Ruhr. Other 1st army columns reached Hallenberg and Frankenberg—the latter 200 miles southwest of the western limits of Berlin.

Overrun Nazi Air Field

The 1st army was driving ahead so rapidly that at one point tanks overran an air field near Langwiesse and shot up eight planes before the pilots could get them in the air. At another point they caught up with a train and turned their guns upon it.

North of Muenchausen, 30 SS [Elite] troops tried to throw up a road block and were scattered like feathers, a front dispatch said.

Earlier, under the shield of a 36 hour news blackout, Hodges' tanks crossed the Lahn river, taking Marburg without opposition. The enemy was unable to make a stand along this river and infantry rushed in behind the tanks to consolidate the gains.

German resistance in this area seemed crushed and elements of the 9th infantry division easily mopped up what could be located.

The 1st infantry division, moving up southwest of Siegen, captured prisoners who said they had left Duesseldorf eight days before to move down and attempt to stem the 1st army tide. It took them eight days to travel 40 miles because of constant air attacks and other transport difficulties.

Down Super-highway

Southeast of Limburg the 9th armored division sent a column down the autobahn [super-highway], forcing another spearhead into the enemy.

The 1st army captured about 13,000 prisoners on Wednesday, including 5,695 German wounded left behind in hospitals. The army also rescued 277 seriously wounded Americans in boxcars west of Wetzlar.

Patton's 3d army, which had been moving northward earlier in the day, suddenly turned east and spurted 20 miles across the Frankfurt plain almost unopposed, entering Lauterbach, 198 miles from Berlin.

This placed the 4th armored "breakthru" division 140 miles inside the reich, 65 miles beyond the Rhine at Mainz, and about 235 miles from the Russians on the east front.

While one 4th armored force entered Lauterbach another column entered Ulrichstein, 10 miles to the southwest. Another 4th armored column moved 8 miles northeastward to the vicinity of Beltersham, which is 10 miles east of the fallen town of Giessen. This force last was six miles from a junction with 1st army troops. The 4th armored took 8,000 prisoners during the day.

Frankfurt Cleared

Patton's columns were encountering only feeble resistance, a few mines and unmanned roadblocks, and had 8,970 square miles of German territory under their rule.

Frankfurt, Germany's ninth largest city with a normal population of 546,000, was cleared by the 4th infantry division of the 3d army.

The 6th armored division driving north of Frankfurt was less than three miles south of Bad Nauheim, where a number of United States nationals were interned after Hitler declared war on the United States. The 6th armored bagged 6,000 prisoners.

Pushing six miles, the 87th infantry division reached the vicinity of Aumenau, 22 miles south of Giessen. Other elements of the 87th drove 19 miles north to the area of Gons, six miles south of Giessen.

The 87th also cleared Michelbach, 19 miles north of Bingen, in an advance which moved across the Limburg-Frankfurt auto highway.

The 76th infantry gained five miles to the east and entered Orlen, six miles north of Wiesbaden.

The 3d army had linked up with the 1st army at three places west of Frankfurt, and now the 1st, 3d, and 7th armies held a solid front of more than 150 miles beyond the Rhine.

The first contact of the 1st and 3d armies was made by Patton's cavalry elements, who met the 9th armored divison at Idstein, nine miles north of captured Wiesbaden, celebrated German health resort. Wiesbaden is 16 miles west of Frankfurt.

Another junction was made 14 miles north of Wiesbaden near Kamburg, and the third was made by the 9th armored and an unidentified 3d army infantry division near Niddernhausen, 14 miles west of Frankfurt.

38 Miles Beyond Rhine

Mannheim, once the second largest Rhine port, fell to troops of the 7th army's 44th infantry division.

Patch's 7th army hurdled the River Main at numerous points just south of the 3d army crossings and pushed almost three miles east against light resistance, driving up to 38 miles beyond the Rhine.

Simultaneously, other forces to the south crossed the Neckar river, outflanking Mannheim. They cleared Feudenheim, across the Neckar from Mannheim air field and a mile east of the city.

The 45th infantry division advanced two miles east of Main river south of Aschaffenberg. The 106th cavalry group [formerly the Chicago Black Horse troop], on the right, forced a crossing of the Main south of Aschaffenberg.

The Germans blew up 11 Neckar river bridges between Mannheim and Ladenburg, six miles to the east.

Eleven miles southeast of Mannheim, along the Neckar, lies the storied university city of Heidelberg. Along this valley the Americans might push southeastward toward Stuttgart, outflanking the Black Forest, strongest natural position in southern Germany.

The 7th army has taken 3,000 prisoners in the last 24 hours.

"Several bridges now are operating across the Rhine in the 7th army area," a statement from Gen. Patch's field headquarters said.

BERLIN GETS BOMBING REST AFTER 36 DAYS; BENZOL PLANT RAIDED

LONDON, March 29 (AP)—Driving thru storm clouds which kept virtually all other planes grounded, R. A. F. Lancasters today bombarded a benzol plant near Brunswick in a blow aimed at stopping motor fuel supplied to the German army.

United States 8th air force bombers remained on their fields in England during inclement weather and for the first time in 45 days planes of the United States 9th air force were unable to make attacks on enemy targets.

Today ended 20 straight days of operations by fighter bombers of the 9th, during which they flew 25,275 sorties with loss of 11 planes and played a major role in softening up the enemy for the allied armies' lunge across the Rhine. Bad weather also shielded Germany last night and R. A. F. Mosquito bombers had to halt their methodical pounding of Berlin which had continued for 36 successive nights.

CANADA DROPS AIRPLANE CREW TRAINING PLAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

OTTAWA, Ont., March 29—The British commonwealth air training plan, under which some 130,000 air crew men were trained during the last five years, was officially declared closed here today in ceremonies at a near-by airport.

The ceremony was saddened by absence of Comdr. R. A. Brabner, British undersecretary for air, and other British officials, whose plane was lost on the way over to Canada. More than 100,000 ground crew and administration staff men are now available for release to other military branches or war industry.

The royal Canadian air force will continue to operate some training schools and to train, on a contract basis, an undisclosed number of royal air force pilots and navigators.

7 YANKS AMONG 2,300 WOUNDED IN NAZI HOSPITAL

BY JOHN THOMPSON

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

HERBRON, Germany, March 28 [Delayed]—In capturing this town yesterday, our armored division took over a big German military hospital containing 2,300 patients. Included in the number were seven American soldiers, four of them air force men. The Yanks were sent immediately to American hospitals. Some of them had been there for three months.

Maj. Samuel Cohn of Hartford, Conn., surgeon for the armored outfit, said the overcrowded hospital contained only patients who could not walk. All others had been moved by the Germans.

The original hospital building had been expanded to include scores of others in town. Most of them were connected by a labyrinth of tunnels, some of which extended out into the country for half a mile.

Once Housed Mental Patients

Last night while bivouacing there, Lt. Gene Schwatzbeck of Alton, Ill., military government officer, found one tunnel entrance at a house where the Germans held 100 mental patients. The hospital originally had been a mental institution but was taken over by the army at the start of the war.

Until two months ago, Maj. Cohn said, the hospital had received wounded men from the eastern and western fronts but the apparent lack of transportation since then prevented the arrival of any more wounded from the east. Until two months ago, too, German medics disinfected their patients to prevent lice and its deathly pac, typhus, but insufficient supplies had stopped this.

"However, all seven Americans had no lice," said the doctor. "They could walk and they bathed as frequently as possible. An American does this any way." Cohn said that many of the German patients had lice and that three of them had typhus. He immediately started dusting them with the army's DDT powder.

Get Same Food as Nazis

The Americans reported food was terrible, but that they received the same care and rations as the German wounded without distinction.

At Hachenburg, Cohn said he found another "hospital." It was an abandoned school house filled with straw on which lay 75 badly wounded Germans attended by one doctor and 10 enlisted men. Compared with modern medical standards, Cohn said, their facilities were most primitive.

Many of the wounded in the Herbron hospital, he said, had come from the Ardennes offensive. He said that the hospital seemed to be in charge of a paratroop lieutenant who had lost a leg at Medjez el Bab, Tunisia.

ITALIAN FRONT REMAINS QUIET IN RAIN AND FOG

ROME, Italy, March 29 (AP)—Troops along the Italian front remained locked in their months' old positions for another day as rain swept United States 5th army lines and fog settled over the Apennine mountains below Bologna today. Even the allied air forces were prevented by the weather from attacking targets in southern Europe.

American gunners started a number of fires in the enemy defense arc before Bologna, which the Germans have been strengthening for six months. British and French destroyers were reported to have shelled German positions near the French-Italian border.

ALLIED ADVANCE STRESSES LOSS OF NAZI AIR POWER

Guns, Tanks, Trucks Clog Roads

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

WITH THE 21ST ARMY GROUP, Germany, March 29—A jeep tour behind allied lines encountered highways packed with guns, troop carriers, tanks, and trucks.

Pilots reported similar scenes behind the German lines. The Nazi retreat, however, is facilitated by better roads than those serving the allies. Much equipment and many soldiers are escaping because of the superior roads behind the Germans.

Troops Butcher Live Stock

The extent of the allied spearheads is likely to be limited not so much by enemy resistance, but by the capacity of the supply routes. On the front soldiers are butchering the hogs and cattle and eating from the well stocked cellars of the German farmers. At present there has been no lack of ammunition. But the supply routes are getting longer daily.

More bridges are being built across the Rhine and the present phase of the campaign emphasizes the German loss of air power. Highway congestion and roadside storage of equipment and supplies are in contempt of German air raiders. Their reconnaissance planes appear continually, kept high by ack-ack [anti-aircraft fire]. These planes usually can be seen fleeing allied fighters.

Only at night are the Germans able to use the skies to any extent. The darkness which protects the enemy bombers also handicaps their hitting the target.

Some Confusion in Air

Allied anti-aircraft production has become intense and rapid advances on the ground have resulted in some confusion in the air. The western boundary for allied strafing and bombing is being moved eastward on the control maps every few hours.

Owing to a lag in communications, bomber pilots have been ordered to verify identifications of ground forces before unloading on what they had been told at their briefing was a target close behind the enemy lines.

The capacity of the Rhine crossings is being increased daily. Supply dumps east of the water barrier are growing. With adequate munitions across the Rhine, Germany's superhighways, built by Hitler for conquest, will be available for allied transport to hasten his defeat.

Chicagoan Hurt Second Time in Forest Battle

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, March 29—Corp. Walter S. Owens, 34, of 5527 W. Crystal st., Chicago, is recuperating in a United States army hospital in England from back wounds received Dec. 12 while fighting in the Huertgen forest in Germany. Owens, who is a mortar gunner, also was wounded Aug. 15 when hit in the left leg by a mortar shell fragment. He holds the Purple Heart with a cluster.

21 PRISONERS OF GESTAPO FREED BY U. S. TANKS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

WITH A. U. S. ARMORED DIVISION ON THE ROAD TO BERLIN, March 28 [Delayed]—When United States tanks rolled into Herbron yesterday they liberated 21 political prisoners, French, Belgian, Dutch, German, and one Englishman. Shunted around Germany on work details, their charcoal burning truck broke down in Herbron Sunday. When their guards started back this group stayed behind and they were locked in the city police station.

"I shouted out the window," said the Britisher, "and the Yanks heard me. They got out of a half-track, opened the doors and gave us our freedom."

This man had been a policeman on Guernsey Isle, where he and 18 others were arrested for sabotage and receiving goods from the allies. He told how 6,000 Channel Island residents of English birth had been taken inland by the Germans and placed in towns which were getting the heaviest allied bombardment.

BODY FOUND IN LAKE

Coast guardsmen went 12 miles out on the lake yesterday to recover the body of a woman, about 55, which had been immersed for two months. She was 5 feet 4 inches tall. The body was taken to the County morgue to await identification.

MAYOR OF RUINED PORT ON RHINE HAD GOOD IDEA

But He and His White Flag Failed to Appear

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

WITH THE U. S. 7TH ARMY IN MANNHEIM, Germany, March 29—The burgomeister of this smashed port on the Rhine had a good idea yesterday, but it didn't work out.

As doughboys of the 71st regiment of the 44th division swept into the northern portion of the city, one of their first objectives was the waterworks. They were going thru it, rounding up prisoners, when the telephone rang. A Yank, who spoke German, answered and learned that a minor official south of the Neckar river which runs east and west thru Mannheim, wanted the Americans to stop shooting.

The burgomeister came to the phone a moment later. He confirmed his subordinate's statement. He said there were no more German soldiers in the city and he was prepared to surrender. He was told to come to the river's edge with a white flag.

Mayor Fails to Appear

But the burgomeister never appeared. There were still enemy troops south of the river and their commanding general would not allow them to yield.

So during the night American artillery gave South Mannheim more of a pounding and today our foot troops waded and rowed across the Neckar. Inside the city they found most of the German soldiers had gone, and started cleaning out snipers, a few of whom were still active this evening.

The Germans have blown up all the Neckar bridges from the confluence of that river and the Rhine down to famed Heidelberg, 10 miles southeast of Mannheim.

And the enemy guns emplaced to the south and southeast were shelling the lower city—or what remains of it. For Mannheim, in peace time the second largest river port in Europe, is almost as much of a ruin now as is Saarbruecken.

Dense, black smoke swathed the whole city today from thousands of burning gallons of oil—the depot had been hit several days ago by American shells.

Panorama of Ruin

The northern part of Mannheim had not suffered as much as the southern, but even above the Neckar there were wide belts of destruction. South of the river, Mannheim was a panorama of complete ruin. All its well known structures——the art gallery, the planetarium, the city hall, the National theater where two of Schiller's plays had their premiers—are gone.

Mannheim had the reputation of being the most perfectly designed city in Germany, being split into 136 rectangles. It now looks like a jigsaw puzzle with many of the pieces lost or broken forever.

Mannheim had been a target for allied bombers since 1940 and our shellings of the last few days completed the surrealistic pattern of wreckage. Very little of the debris—even that of three and four years ago—had been cleared away, and grass had grown over some of the older ruins.

No Sign of Industries.

There was no sign of Mannheim's industries, such as iron, steel, automobiles, and glass. Not even the rudimentary fixtures and furnaces could be discerned in the havoc.

The peace time population of Mannheim was 285,000. Today there is less than one-twentieth of that in the city; the others are dead or evacuated. Some of those remaining came out of their cellars today. They stared dully for a while, but as the American infantry and armor moved past in long powerful lines the dullness was replaced by gapes of awe. The Americans' expression never changed. They were stony faced.

YANKS PROTECT GERMANS FROM ANGRY ALIENS

Women Claw Foremen in Ruhr Area

BY HENRY WALES
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

HAMBORN, Germany, March 29—American troops have been called upon to protect Germans against attacks by Russians, Poles, Frenchmen, and Italians who were removed to this highly industrialized Ruhr area and forced to work in Germany's war factories.

Huge plants in this area have not been operating since January as result of allied air attacks. Thousands of foreign laborers were practically starving. They were enraged because Hitler had refused to permit the transportation of foodstuffs.

Women Claw Germans

The forced workers, particularly the women, clawed, scratched, and kicked their former oppressors until the Americans stepped in.

Five hundred Russian women started a riot last night. They stoned their German foremen and air raid wardens. It was disclosed that French laborers had attacked German workers and overseers, accusing them of cruelty and of starving them.

It was an impressive and sobering sight to drive in a jeep thru the Ruhr area and witness the frightful destruction wrought by bombs and shells.

Finds People Emaciated

The populace reflects months of crouching in shelters day and night as the sirens screamed and planes swooped above. The people were emaciated and their skin putty colored from a long winter ordeal.

The miserable, dejected civilians reacted to the retreat of the German army by plundering wine shops and liquor stores. Hundreds, who lacked a square meal for months, became intoxicated with the first swigs of Rhine wine or German brandy.

But the forced laborers, buoyed by hope and liberation, withstood the effects of the alcohol surprisingly well. They paraded the streets, singing the "Marseillaise" and the "Internationale." From their pitiful belongings they produced French tricolors, Russian, and Polish flags to celebrate their release.

Pvt. Lee Mack, 3637 Sheffield av., Chicago, took part in the capture of a battery of 88 millimeter guns, which had been interfering with the American advance.

Start Freedom Spree

DARMSTADT, Germany, March 29 (AP)—Liberated foreign workers in a freedom spree provided a headache for the American military government today by widespread looting and pillaging, climaxed by the attempted assassination of Darmstadt's allied appointed burgomeister.

Departing Nazi bigwigs had spread the word they were leaving behind enough undercover men to kill all German officials taking orders from the conquering Americans, but the mayor's would-be assassin was not a Nazi agent. He was a liberated foreign worker who did not like Germans.

This was established by military government detachments headed by Lt. Col. Clare R. Davis, former Auburn, Ill., school superintendent.

The first 48 hours after the German army fled Darmstadt was a field day for liberated aliens who broke into houses, obtained weapons and began requisitioning clothing and supplies. They took shoes from German women in the streets and plundered supply trains which the retreating Nazis left in the railway yards and on sidings.

Richard Bert Coe, 7732 Haskins av., was among 10 honor men in the class of 935 midshipmen who received ensign commissions at graduation exercises yesterday at Navy pier. The top man of the class was James Marshall Parks of Topeka, Kas.

Rear Adm. Osborne B. Hardison, chief of naval air primary training of the Glenview naval air station, addressed the graduates, who were trained at the United States naval reserve midshipmen school on Northwestern university's Chicago campus.

Other honor men of the class included Garth Hertzler Miller of Moberly, Mo., and John Fred Wolly of Little Rock, Ark. After graduation in July of another class now in training, the midshipmen's school will be closed.

BOMB ATTACKS BLAST PRO-AXIS OFFICES IN SPAIN

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune]

LONDON, March 29—Demonstrations of anti-axis feeling in Spain have taken a violent turn in the last several months with the bombing of Fascist propaganda agencies in Madrid, but there is little popular enthusiasm for the campaign of indignation lately drummed up by official propagandists against the remote Japanese.

News of the bombings was suppressed by censorship for both domestic and foreign publication but it reached London today thru private channels. A bomb was placed in the offices of the pro-axis evening paper, Informacions, the night of March 13, and early in February two bombs exploded in the government building housing the vice secretariat of national education which controls Falangist propaganda.

In November the German information center, a Nazi propaganda office on a principal downtown street, was bombed with considerable property damage resulting. The German agency is in the Falange national executive office building and in recent months, with surface changes in Spain's policy towards the axis, has been a cause of embarrassment to the Spanish party.

Spanish official propagandists based their campaign against the Japanese, primarily on Japanese atrocities against Spanish nationals in the Philippines but later took the line that Japan was a menace to civilization in general and Christianity in particular.

FAMED CITADEL OF RHINE AGAIN UNDER U. S. FLAG

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS IN GERMANY, March 29 (AP)—One of the most famous Rhineland fortresses to fall to American arms is Ehrenbreitstein, a military stronghold since the Roman days.

And today, over this citadel from which in 1923 the last troops of the first World war army of occupation left Germany for the United States, the American flag flies again.

Among the officers at the fort were some who were there when the Stars and Stripes were hauled down 22 years ago—for what they thought then would be the final time.

High Above Rhine

"Nobody knows when we will pull it down from the German flagpoles now," one of them said.

The fortress overlooks Coblenz. It is situated on a steep rock on the east bank 385 feet above the Rhine opposite the mouth of the Mosel river. Roman invaders 2,000 years ago were quick to see the value of the rock as a protective position. They built a camp there. More than a thousand years later it was renovated in the year 1160 and subsequently the Elector John, margrave of Baden, repaired and enlarged it.

The French army blockaded Ehrenbreitstein after crossing the Rhine in 1795 and twice in the following year besieged it again. The French blockaded it once more in 1798. It fell the next year and when the French evacuated it in 1801 they blew up its defenses.

Military Tourist Mecca

Since then huge sums have been expended to reconstruct the battlements which fell easily to American infantrymen a few days ago. Now the fortress is just a place where military tourists can enjoy one of the most notable views of the Rhineland.

In near-by Ehrenbreitstein town [3,000 population] is the house—in recent years converted into a hotel—where Goethe, Germany's foremost literary figure, stayed in 1774.

TRAITOR GERMAN MAYOR BLOWN UP, BERLIN SAYS

Delares His Entire Family Died in Blast

LONDON, March 29 (AP)—The Berlin radio tonight said that "German freedom fighters" had assassinated Franz Oppenhof, allied appointed mayor of Aachen. It added that another "traitor" mayor had been blown up with his entire family in the village of Muetzenich, near Monschau south of Aachen.

The radio said that Oppenhof, whose assassination at his home in Aachen by three Nazi parachutists was announced yesterday by the allies, had been convicted by the "national court for the maintenance of German honor and immediately sentenced to death."

The victim of the second execution was identified by the German Transocean news agency as a former school teacher named Velten, a "traitor German mayor serving under the allied military government." It said Velten and his family were killed in an explosion caused by "unknown perpetrators."

Jap Envoys Quit Berlin

As the Nazis announced the inauguration of their terror campaign against collaborationists, three Japanese diplomats, including Minister Sabura Saguwara, reached Stockholm by plane from Berlin.

Swiss dispatches said many high Nazi officials already had taken refuge on the German island of Mainau on Lake Constance, waiting for the war to end and hoping to sneak into Switzerland at the last minute. The Swiss have reënforced their frontier guard to prevent such entries.

Lt. Gen. Kurt Dittmar, Germany's high command military commentator, in a broadcast asked the question: "Is there any sense in continuing the fight?" He answered it by saying: "Our enemy wants to annihilate the entire nation and himself gives the answer—we must fight to the last."

Sees Life of Slavery

Reiterating Nazis' no surrender doctrine, Dr. Werner Naumann, assist to Propaganda Minister Goebbels, declared:

"Our existence is a hard one, the bomb terror is severe, food rations have been cut. But it is a thousand times more worth while to bear this life than the slavery which our enemies have in store for our men and the life of shame to which they want to condemn our wives, daughters, and mothers."

DNB, official German news agency, told the Germans in a broadcast that Anglo-American tank forces sweeping toward Berlin from the west could be defeated with a weapon similar to the American bazooka.

Exhorting the people to "keep your nerve," the agency said the German rocket projector, called the "tankfist," could be produced in an hour and was capable of knocking out a medium tank which required 13,000 man hours for production.

"A better spirit, greater steadfastness, courage, and determination proved better than the heaviest Russian tanks and the unending stream of Russian masses," the broadcast said. "What has been achieved in the east can be achieved in the west."

Describe German Flight

A German radio correspondent, describing the flight of thousands of refugees from the Rhineland toward the interior, said:

"They had to walk for days because no transport was available. Only after several days did the Nazi party put some carts and trucks at their disposal, and despite all official reports there were many hardships. Roads were bombed and the people often had to throw away their bundles—the last remnants they had saved from bombings."

The Geneva newspaper La Suisse quoted an eyewitness report of the hanging of eight Germans in one south German city "for having simply doubted the efficacy of the defense measures." The paper said that thruout south Germany "every one realizes the war is lost, but no one dares say so openly."

The newspaper said columns of refugees were pouring on foot into southern Germany, and that the food situation there was critical. It said allied prisoners who managed to escape now were generally well treated by the German population.

Wed in Belgium

Capt. A. M. Tooley and Lt. Eleanore Dejno.

An army romance begun three years ago when the couple was stationed at Fort Bragg, N. C., culminated March 15 in the marriage of Capt. Anthony M. Tooley of 1260 Lake Shore dr., and 1st Lt. Eleanore Dejno, an army nurse from Eau Claire, Wis., it was learned yesterday. The couple, attached to the 1st army, was married at Liege, Belgium by the town's mayor, and then by the Catholic chaplain of the 28th general hospital unit to which the bride is attached.

Capt. Tooley, a service battery commander, met Lt. Dejno early in 1942, then was sent overseas in November and participated in the North Africa and Sicilian campaigns. He arrived in England in December, 1943, to find Lt. Dejno assigned to a hospital unit there. On D-day, Capt. Tooley hit the Normandy beachhead, drove across France, and a few weeks later learned that Lt. Dejno's unit was close behind.

In fact, Lt. Dejno was so close behind that Capt. Tooley was able to visit her on his way to the rear to inspect ammunition dumps. Last January they appealed to supreme headquarters for permission to marry.

NAZI WAR CAMP GUARDS GIVE UP ARMS TO YANKS

Captive Airmen Wait 1st Army's Arrival

WITH THE U. S. 1ST ARMY, March 29 (AP)—German guards voluntarily surrendered their arms and captive American airmen manned the machine guns of the transient prisoner of war camp at Wetzlar when the American 1st army approached and freed them.

Those airmen did not intend for any of the enemy to come and take them away when liberation was so near and the German guards were prepared to help prevent their removal.

Freed by U. S. Armor

Another group of American soldiers, most of them captured in Belgium during the battle of the bulge last December, were freed at Giessen after the Germans had taken them from a camp at Limburg. American armor had moved faster than the prisoners could walk.

Both American and British airmen were kept at the Wetzlar camp. They lived in big barracks just outside the town and received excellent treatment, with plenty of food and clothing. There were hot water, showers, and electric lights.

Like Hollywood Plot

"It was like something out of Hollywood," said Harold Siegman, Brooklyn, N. Y., Acme news photographer who spent the night in the prison camp with Jack Belden, correspondent for Harpers magazine.

"Two nights ago an American colonel and a British major left the camp and came out to contact the Americans. We took them back with us to the camp in a jeep and found both Americans and Germans standing guard.

"The Americans were manning machine guns and the Germans were there to talk to any Germans who might come up. Three SS troopers did come to the camp and they were taken prisoner. Those German guards were ready to fight on our side if they had to."

BARUCH REACHES LONDON; VICTORY NEAR: CHURCHILL

LONDON, March 29 (AP)—Bernard M. Baruch, personal advisor of President Roosevelt, reached London today reputedly to discuss plans for the occupation of Germany with Prime Minister Churchill, who asserted that the "hour of success" was near.

Members of the British war cabinet were ordered to remain close to their posts over the four day Easter holiday and it was learned that arrangements had been made to call parliament back into session immediately if the German collapse should come during parliament's eight day recess.

Churchill's optimistic prediction was made in a letter indorsing a Liberal candidate for commons in a special election to fill a vacancy.

Asks "Just Rewards"

"The endurance of the British people and the steadfast devotion of the fighting services have at last brought us near the hour of success," he said. "Let us now prepare to make sure, for the sake of our country, our empire and civilization, that we reap the due and just rewards of victory."

Key allied commissions which will have the job of administering Germany after the war were said to be ready to move into the field soon. Foreign Secretary Eden told commons "high priority" had been given to the task of disarming the Nazis and dismantling their industries.

Expect Victory Soon

Just how and when would come the moment of transition from German organized resistance to that of Nazi guerrilla warfare remained uncertain. The London Times expressed the opinion that German provinces might be taken over one by one until the entire country was occupied, and "in that way the end will come."

Among the British people themselves there was mounting anticipation that victory might come soon and suddenly. An atmosphere of victory was noticeable, but there was no hilarity, because V-bombs still are striking in southern England.

There was known to have been a sharp increase in the flow of communications between the capitals of the "Big Three," but otherwise there was nothing concrete to indicate the war was near its end.

Prepare for Happiest Easter

The British are preparing for their happiest Easter of the war. Easter is their best holiday of the year.

War plants will be kept working, but nearly everything else will shut down or operate on skeleton shifts. Stores will close from Good Friday until Tuesday.

Women and children are leading the exodus from London for seaside and country.

NAVY DISCLOSES LOSS OF LCS, LST IN PHILIPPINES

Washington, D. C., March 29 (AP)—Loss of a tank landing ship and a large support landing craft in the Philippines from enemy action was announced today by the navy.

The vessels were the LCS [L] [3]-7 and the LST-577. The support landing craft is a type which normally carries a crew of 50 men, and the LST a crew of 65 to 75.

No announcement was made of casualties. The LST-577 was under command of Lt. Carl H. Stahl, San Diego, Cal., who was listed as missing in action.

The support landing craft was under command of Lt. Franklin L. Kilder, Nacogdoches, Tex. He was reported safe.

Beg Your Pardon

In a story in Wednesday's TRIBUNE Pvt. Donald Lux, 22, of 615 N. Butrick st., Waukegan, was erroneously listed as killed in action on the western front. Pvt. Lux is listed as missing in action.

A butterfly which emerged on Wednesday from a chrysalis in the home of Mrs. Theresa Halapek, 4856 Byron st., was identified in yesterday's TRIBUNE as a luna moth. That identification was in error. Authorities yesterday said it was a polyphemus or a cercropia. There are no common names for either of these butterflies.

CLAY APPOINTED TO HANDLE CIVIL AFFAIRS IN REICH

Shift May Ease Curbs on Civilian Life

Washington, D. C., March 29 (AP)—Assignment of Maj. Gen. Lucius D. Clay as civil affairs administrator in occupied Germany led tonight to predictions of less military intervention in affairs of the American home front.

Maj. Gen. Lucius D. Clay

Clay was deputy director in charge of production programs for the office of war mobilization and reconversion under James F. Byrnes. He has been criticized by members of Byrnes' civilian advisory committee as permitting the army to shape much of OWMR's policy.

One possible choice mentioned as his successor was Col. Bryan Houston, former rationing director of the OPA. Houston was known for "liberal" rationing policies and for an oft repeated expression: "Let's give the civilians a break."

A spokesman for OWMR discouraged speculation on Houston, saying that Byrnes has not made a decision.

Hope for Civilian.

Most war agency sources acknowledged the hope that a civilian would get the assignment. Houston, a Texan, is in uniform in army public relations. He was with the army service forces under Gen. Somervell before and after his OPA tour of duty and handled procurement and surplus disposal matters.

Fred Searls Jr., former WPB official and now Gen. Clay's deputy in OWMR, has been suggested as another possible choice.

Clay will leave the country "within a few days," President Roosevelt said, as deputy to Gen. Eisenhower in charge of civil affairs. His authority presumably will cover only the south German territory which is to be occupied by Americans.

Sought by "Ike"

Eisenhower asked for Clay three weeks ago, Mr. Roosevelt said, but the designation was delayed because of an OWMR agreement with the army that Clay would remain with Byrnes until April 1.

It was learned that members of the OWMR advisory committee—which is made up of representatives of management, labor, agriculture, and the public—were informed of Clay's impending departure a few weeks ago.

BARTENDER AND $300 GONE.

'PHANTOM CITY' TO FOOL RAIDERS FOUND IN RUHR

INSIDE THE RUHR FLAK DEFENSES, Germany, March 29 (AP)—Uncovered by the advance of the 35th infantry division is one of Germany's "phantom cities," constructed to fool night bombers into dropping their loads outside the Ruhr valley.

It is one of the first real war secrets uncovered by allied armies driving across the Rhine. Constructed probably around 1942, the "phantom city" lies in the heart of a wooded area near Gladbeck.

It is an odd looking series of contraptions. First there are high posts with boards across their tops. They look like basketball backboards except that instead of hoops they have shaded lights casting beams downward. Apparently from the air at night row after row of these gave the illusion of many houses or a big factory.

Roofs on the Ground

Next in the "phantom city" is a series of "chimneys" about 10 feet high, large and made of wood. From the air they must look as if they are sticking out of a camouflaged building.

Then there is a series of plain wooden roofs spread along the ground to give the illusion of rows of buildings. Each roof is rigged with a shaded light to outline it at night. There also are smoke pots and places in which quick fires could be built to make it seem that these "buildings" were burning. The complete layout is inside the Ruhr anti-aircraft defenses, but some distance from the vital targets of Homborn, Gladbeck, and Duisburg.

Failed to Work Recently

Judging by the age of the construction work and the ancient character of bomb craters in the vicinity, it is apparent that the R. A. F. has not been fooled in recent months by the German trick.

Hundreds of searchlights have been overrun in the drive thru the Ruhr. A number of radar installations, most of them permanent ones which could not be moved, also has been taken.

UNDERGROUND URGES GERMAN TOWN TO YIELD

BY JOHN THOMPSON

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HERBRON, Germany, March 28 [Delayed]—First evidence of the German underground at work was reported today in Herbron when a freed political prisoner told of seeing thousands of pamphlets distributed a few days ago in Siegburg on the Sieg river. I saw one of these mimeographed sheets.

They urged every one to hand out white flags and warned them not to fire a single shot, saying that Siegburg must be spared and only in this way would the war be ended quickly.

The sheet I saw said that the Nazi Brownshirts had fled like cowards before the threat of Americans and urged soldiers and civilians to hang out the "flag of peace" in order to save the homeland.

BRITISH SAIL TO RYUKYUS FROM SECRET U. S. BASE

Use Their Own and American Planes

GUAM, March 29 (AP)—British warships which joined the American naval assault on the Ryukyu Islands sailed from a secret United States Pacific base. An American naval officer who described the departure spoke of the British element as "a powerful task force made up of battleships, carriers, cruisers, and destroyers."

The lead ship of the formation was a heavily armed cruiser of the latest type. British officers and ratings lined the rails of the flagship, the dreadnaught King George V., and gave the thumbs up victory salute.

Exchange Greetings.

As the flagship, bearing the task force commander, Vice Adm. Bernard Rawlings, pulled up parallel with United States Commodore Worrall R. Carter's famous Service Squadron 10, Worrall blinkered:

"Good hunting, good luck, and Godspeed to you, British brothers."

By signal flags Rawling replied:

"Thank you very much. I hope we meet again, commodore, nearer Tokyo."

As the last ship of the force moved out of the base, the leading cruiser disappeared over the horizon.

Shells Are British

Most of the fleet's shells, bombs and other armament are its own, from England, and its food and much of its other equipment from Australia and New Zealand.

The composition of its air arm is undisclosed, but British carriers are known to be using American planes as well as Seafires and Fireflies.

The Seafire is the carrier version of the famed Spitfire. It carries two 20 mm. cannon, four machine guns and a 1,470 horsepower Rolls Royce Merlin engine. Its wings fold at the tips as well as at the roots. Because of this it is known as the Praying Mantis.

The Firefly is a heavily armed British naval plane—four 20 mm. cannon and equipped to use rockets.

British Unwed Mothers' Claims on G. I.s Pressed

LONDON, March 29 (AP)—Rhyes Davies, Laborite member of commons, wants to know how unmarried British women may lodge "claims against men serving in the American forces in this country in respect of their illegitimate children." He said today he would present the question to Herbert Morrison, home secretary, on April 12.

4 YANK FORCES POISED TO TAKE LUZON BASTION

How MacArthur Sets Stage for Baguio

BY WALTER SIMMONS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

SAN FERNANDO, Northern Luzon, March 28—The Philippine battle zone has shifted to the north, where four American columns are slowly converging on Baguio, with the weight of fighting borne by the 33d division, the former Illinois national guard unit.

This is a quick brush-up of the northern Luzon campaign:

When Gen. MacArthur's forces landed in Lingayen gulf on Jan. 9 it was evident almost at once that they could speed down the broad central plains to Manila, some 135 miles away, almost without opposition.

Such a stroke, however, would be military suicide with known enemy concentrations on their left flank in the Rosario area and on the right in the Clark field and Fort Stotsenburg region. Enemy spearheads could sever the long American communication line at many points.

Divides His Forces

To guard this line and protect his rear bases in Lingayen gulf, MacArthur assigned the bulk of his force while two divisions edged cautiously toward Manila. In a five week battle against tough enemy resistance the 43d division and the 137th regimental combat team occupied the Damortis, Rosario, Sison, Pozorrubio line to protect the rear and left flank.

The 40th division on the right confined the enemy in the Clark field area. With these precautions taken, the 1st cavalry and the 37th division made their historic dash into Manila and the first phase of the battle for Luzon was over.

The 33d division went into the line on Feb. 15 to relieve the 43d. In four days of fighting it seized Pozorrubio, Sison, Rosario highway, which had been No Man's land and shelled by artillery from both sides.

The stage was now set for the push up the Kennon road—the main highway from Rosario to Baguio.

Chicagoan Commands

While other elements were moving up this obvious route of approach, two battalions of the 123d regiment, commanded by Lt. Col. Charles Coates of Peoria, Ill., and Lt. Col. James W. Hilton of 7838 Kimbark av., Chicago, rammed northward and on March 7, aided by flanking assistance from the 3d battalion, seized Pugo, six miles to the north.

On the same night motorized elements of the 130th regiment, of which Lt. Col. Ellis Blake of Kewanee, Ill., is executive officer, made a surprise eight mile advance up the coast from Damortis, seizing Aringay and with it a railway bridge.

Now three approaches to Baguio were available—by the Kennon road, overland from Pugo, and by the Aringay-Galiano road. While troops mopped up in the hills, engineers bulldozed a supply road out of Pugo, 3,000 yards toward Baguio.

Open Fourth Approach

As of March 19 guerrilla regiments commanded by Col. Russell Volckmann of Clinton, Ia., a regular army officer, held San Fernando, 20 miles north of Aringay. Advancing north to contact this force, a battalion of the 130th secured Bauang in an eight mile advance, driving the surprised Japs from two 500 foot highway bridges and one 2,000 foot rail bridge which had been prepared for demolition with 500 pound bombs.

This move opened a fourth approach to Baguio. Unlike the others, which are thru defensible defiles, it is over high ground.

As the battle for Baguio moves into the final stages, three other forces are almost within sight of the city. One has reached Camp 3—seven miles distant by the Kennon road. Another is eight miles from Baguio by the Aringay-Galiano road, and a third faces a seven mile push over difficult trails from Pugo. These units of the Illinois division face a defending enemy force estimated by Col. Volckmann to number many thousands of men.

Abe's Cot Is All Shot, So the Marines Give Him New One

BY WALTER SIMMONS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MANGALDAN, Luzon, March 27 [Delayed]—Sitting on a brand new cot in his tent, Master Tech. Sgt. Abraham L. Marovitz of 1323 Independence blvd., Chicago, a marine, was entertaining a little gathering of Chicagolanders today.

Sgt. A. L. Marovitz.

Marovitz, who enlisted in April, 1943, is on military leave as Illinois state senator from the 19th district, which comprises the west side of Chicago, Cicero, and Berwyn. He came ashore on Luzon the day following D-day, thru artillery crossfire and during a bombing raid.

His visitors were Lt. Col. Jacob M. Arvey, former Chicago alderman, who is judge advocate and civil affairs officer for the 33d division; Corp. James Ford of Moline, Ill., a marine who was captured by the Japs on Corregidor in 1942 and recently freed from Bilibid prison in Manila; Staff Sgt. Dick O'Connor of Kenilworth, Ill., a marine, and son of John O'Connor, Chicago merchant; Paul Wigoda of Pedria, Ill., navy pharmicist's mate attached to the marines, and Corp. Nick Namula of Hammond, Ind., a marine air wing ground crew man.

Corp. Ford, who "skipped out" from an army hospital to rejoin the marines after his release and whose weight has increased from 129 to 175 pounds, in the meantime explained how Sgt. Marovitz got the new cot.

"He really needed it," Ford said. "The other night a few Jap planes came over. One of their bombs dropped out there about 10 feet from this tent. It killed two men, shot the tent full of holes, ventilated Abe's mosquito net, and cut his cot up so much we had to junk it."

Reports Nazi Fleet May Fight on After War's End

LONDON, March 29 (AP)—A naval authority today said that German submarines and surface craft might fight on as long as six weeks after the land war ends in Europe. Their supplies could last that long, the authority said.

CEBU INVADERS LAND ON 2 MORE PHILIPPINE ISLES

MANILA, March 30 [Friday]—(AP)—Elements of Maj. Gen. William H. Arnold's Americal division, conquerers of Cebu city on Cebu, invaded Mactan Island, directly across a narrow channel from that second port of the Philippines Wednesday, Gen. MacArthur reported today.

The tiny island of Cauit, to the southwest in Cebu harbor, also was invaded. Cauit is a seaplane base.

MacArthur said Opon, the main city of Mactan, was secured. On Mactan Island is the biggest coconut oil refinery in the Philippines. It was set ablaze by Japanese demolition crews Monday when the Yanks landed in Cebu.

Capture Cebu Air Field

On Cebu itself, the infantry men struck north and south from the wrecked capital, capturing Lahug air field to the north and the town of Naga, 14 miles south.

MacArthur said enemy resistance "still appeared disorganized."

Count 1,338 Dead Japs

Only minor action were reported on Luzon, where in the central sector 1,338 additional dead were counted in mopping up operations.

Legaspi, major port on southeastern Luzon, was hit with more than 200 tons of bombs.

The bulletin, silent for days about progress on invaded Mindanao island, said only that heavy bombers and fighters bombed Jolo and Tawi Tawi in the Sulu archipelago to the southwest.

JAPS ADVANCE IN SMASH FOR U. S. AIR FIELD

CHUNGKING, China, March 29 (AP)—The United States 14th air force today pounded a point only five miles from Laohokow, American air base 200 miles northwest of Hankow, indicating the Japanese had made a 20 mile advance toward it.

A bulletin also indicated that Nanyang, Honan province town northwest of Hankow and one of the main Chinese bastions in Free China's defenses between the Yangtze and Yellow rivers, had fallen. The Japanese were estimated to be using more than 80,000 men in a push that may menace either Sian, in Shensi, or Chungking.

Fourteenth air force bombers, in sweeps off Hainan Island in the week ended March 23 sank a 6,500 ton and a 5,000 ton freighter, headquarters announced.

AUSSIES STORM BOUGAINVILLE JAP STRONGHOLD

San Francisco, Cal., March 29 (AP)—New Australian successes on the northern Solomons Island of Bougainville, where the Aussies have taken over the job of wiping out Japanese forces, were reported by the Melbourne radio today.

The broadcast said that on the Satokan peninsula of northern Bougainville the Australians captured Smith hill, center of Japanese resistance.

ASTHMA ALIBI SAVED HIS LIFE, EX-CAPTIVE SAYS

An asthmatic condition, aggravated intentionally each time the Japanese doctors examined American prisoners to select workers to be sent to Japan, was credited yesterday by Corp. Marvin [Buster] Laycock, 30, with saving his life. Corp. Laycock, one of 511 prisoners liberated Feb. 3 from Cabanatuan, arrived yesterday to visit his daughter, Janet Elizabeth, 8; his sister, Mrs. Benjamin G. Nickoley of 338 Lincoln av., Libertyville, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Laycock, Fox Lake.

Corp. Laycock explained that each time the doctors came to examine the prisoners, he would subject himself to dust and corn pollen to escape the work draft. The corporal's continued illness, plus the lack of food, cost him 64 pounds during his imprisonment, he said. One week after his liberation, he gained 15 pounds and now weighs 175 pounds—15 more than when he enlisted in January, 1941.

The corporal's daughter, whom he last had seen on her fourth birthday anniversary, Dec. 15, 1940, prayed nightly for her father's return, she told him. She told him that she always asked, "Take care of all the boys and please bring my daddy home safely."

STALIN SCRAPS YALTA PROMISE TO FREE POLAND

London Emigres Barred from Lublin Regime

BY WALTER TROHAN
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., March 29—Dictator Stalin has scrapped the Yalta formula on Poland in which he promised President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill the provisional Communist government he set up for Poland at Lublin would be broadened to include members of the Polish government in London, which is recognized by Britain and the United States as well as Poles who have taken a middle stand between the London and Moscow groups.

The soviet decision to ignore the Crimea pledge, which has distressed official circles here, was disclosed in the daily report of foreign radio broadcasts, prepared for and restricted to government use, by the foreign broadcast intelligence service of the federal communications commission.

The FCC radio monitors intercepted a Russian broadcast in Polish to Poland of an editorial from the official soviet publication War and the Working Class. The publication violently denounced the London Polish government and declared no member of that exiled group would be permitted to join the Lublin government in Warsaw.

Parley Pleas Ignored

Two days after the broadcast the soviet Poles sent a note to Russia, Great Britain, France, China and the United States asking to represent Poland at the San Francisco conference. Because this group is not recognized by the other powers Russia delivered this request to the four nations. No action has been taken on the request, which, if granted, would admit a government recognized by one nation while barring the London group which is recognized by 45 nations. The London group has not received an invitation.

Under the Yalta agreement signed by Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin, it was stated the provisional government "should be reorganized on a broader democratic basis" with the inclusion of democratic leaders from Poland itself and from Poles abroad. The editorial, which is recognized as stating the official position of the soviet government, made it clear the only foreign Poles which will be allowed in the soviet organized Polish government are Poles from Russia.

No "Political Corpses"

"Democratic forces which are grouping themselves around the Polish provisional government are resolved to bring to life the Crimea agreement regarding broadening of the composition of the provisional government by additional inclusion of Democratic leaders from Poland as well as from abroad," the editorial stated. "We are talking about a further inclusion of Democratic leaders, however, and certainly not of attempts to galvanize the political corpses and bankrupt leaders from the thoroly rotten Polish reactionary camp."

The editorial charged members of the London government are shouting against the Crimea decisions because the only hope they see for their own political future is collapse of the anti-Hitler coalition. The editorial also denounced the intermediary position taken by a group of Polish emigres, making it clear that the Reds will not tolerate members of the London government or other Poles not wholeheartedly behind the Russo-Polish government.

"This group [the emigres] has definitely said good-by to the reactionary camp and, quite apart from its personal intentions, by trying to create the appearance of a possible compromise, is only thereby strengthening this group of political bankrupts," the editorial said.

"Spokesmen of Landholders"

The editorial defended the provisional government and denounced all others as spokesmen of landholders who have enslaved the Poles. In this the editorial ignored Polish land reforms, which had taken all but a small fraction of land from the once powerful land owners.

"The Polish provisional government took the only possible road which leads to the formation of a strong, independent, free and democratic Poland . . . the road of determined fight against pro-Hitlerite elements and against reactionary elements," it said.

DEMAND PARLEY SEAT FOR ITALY, 'LOVER OF PEACE'

New York, March 29 (AP)—The joint committee for Italian representation at the security conference in San Francisco today urged the United States to assume the initiative in obtaining an invitation to the conference for Italy.

Luigi Antonini, chairman of the group, which claims to represent more than 1,800,000 Americans of Italian descent, said a resolution had been sent to President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Stettinius asserting:

"It is inconceivable that a conference dedicated to such an urgent and lofty aim can exclude from its deliberations the industrious, peace loving Italian people." It was signed by 35 organizations and individuals, including the Labor League for Human Rights, headed by Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., March 29—Lt. Gen. Alexander A. Vandegrift, commandant of the marine corps, was nominated to be a general, and Vice Adm. Russell R. Waesche, commandant of the coast guard, to be an admiral today by President Roosevelt. Confirmation of the nominations will mark the first time the heads of these organizations have held four star rank.

The President named three other vice admirals for promotion to admiral—Richard S. Edwards, deputy commander in chief of the United States fleet; Henry K. Hewitt, commander of the 8th fleet in the Mediterranean, and Thomas C. Kinkaid, commander of the 7th fleet under Gen. MacArthur.

The long list of nominations included five rear admirals to be promoted to vice admirals, four commodores to be rear admirals, and 20 captains to be commodores.

REDS DEMAND 3 SEATS IN LEAGUE; F. D. R. ASSENTS

Agree on Six British Votes; 3 for U. S.

ity council of 11 nations, the general assembly of all member nations, and an economic and social council. Virtually all the real power for action would be vested in the security council on which Russia, the United States, Britain, France, and China would be permanent members.

These five powers would be outnumbered by six small nations, elected at two year intervals, but the Yalta voting formula provides that no action could be taken without a majority of seven, instead of six, and that on all major questions of agression the Big Five would have to vote unanimously with one exception.

The exception is that on decisions to investigate and try peacefully to settle a dispute, if one of the big powers was itself a party to the dispute, it could not vote. The other four, in such a case, would have to agree unanimously for the council to act.

Veto Is Reds' Idea

This so-called veto arrangement was originally Russian and until today most authorities thought it had satisfied Russia's insistence that power in the world organization must be retained in the hands of the powerful nations.

The newly disclosed Yalta agreements, if accepted at San Francisco, would considerably increase the voting strength of the big nations in the assembly. Britain would have six votes, the United States three, Russia three, and China and France one each—a total of 14 out of 46 or 47, depending on the number of countries initially included.

Many months ago Moscow perplexed officials here by announcing that the soviet union was being broken down, for purposes of foreign and military affairs, into 16 autonomous republics or soviets. Each, it was said, would be able to conduct its foreign affairs independently on issues of primary concern to itself.

Epected to Ask 16 Seats.

There was speculation then that Russia might ask 16 seats in the new league in which case, it was reported, the United States might try to find some way to ask for 48 seats—one for each state.

Nothing more was heard of this until Yalta, when the proposal emerged as a request for, not 16, but three places in the assembly. The additional two seats would be held by the White Russian and the Ukrainian soviets, the most populous of the Russian republics outside the main Russian soviet of which Moscow is the capital. Also those are the two fronting on western Europe.

FRANCE MOVES FOR 80 PCT. TAX ON WAR PROFITS

BY ROBERT SAGE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, March 29—In a two hour speech begun a few minutes after the Paris bourse had closed for a four day Easter holiday, Finance Minister Rene Plevin this afternoon laid his long awaited financial, monetary, and budgetary program before the consultative assembly.

The new program, which already had been approved by 23 out of 26 members of the government, contained the promise of a capital levy later and an 80 per cent war profit tax now, but was tempered by the assurance that there would be no blocking or discounting of bank notes or other experiments tried with dubious success in Belgium.

Bread Price Raised

The measure which most directly hits the public is an increase of one-third in the price of bread designed to shake off the last shackles of the Vichy subsidy policy which paid out 13 billion francs [$260,000,000] annually from the treasury to wheat growers and bakeries to keep the price of bread down.

The principal measures of the Pleven program are:

1. The capital levy, to be known as the "exceptional national equality tax" which will be payable in four years. This tax, which will hit the patrimony of the individual, will be detailed in a law to be promulgated before July 1, coming as a climax to all the other financial measures.

2. As an important step in the government's attempt to absorb a large portion of the bank notes in circulation, a new type of treasury bonds to be called "Liberation bonds," will be issued starting April 1. The new bonds which will not be sold to banks or corporations having a capital of more than 1,000,000 francs, will bear progressively increasing interest up to 2½ per cent, and can be negotiated after six months. The possibility of immediate conversion is hoped to appeal to peasant horders who refused to subscribe to the recent liberation loan.

Eighty Per Cent on Excess

3. A temporary tax on real profits, the rate being fixed at 80 per cent for excess profits on the basis of earnings in 1938.

4. General tightening up of other taxes including a pay as you go system of salary taxes.

5. An increase in the prices of bread, coal, tobacco, and shotgun powder, as well as increases in taxes on spirits, which should bring in an added one billion francs this year and 8 billions in normal years.

Recalling that note circulation had increased from 142 billion francs in 1938 to 632 billions last October, Pleven said the amount had been cut to 574 billions by March 15.

Pleven placed this year's budget at 390 billion francs.

NAZIS BEATEN 'BEYOND HOPE,' SAYS STIMSON

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., March 29—Secretary of War Stimson today told his press conference the German army is beaten beyond hope of anything except unconditional surrender or piecemeal collapse.

Nonetheless, he acknowledged, the Germans might find a temporary line of defense in the interior which might permit them to hold out for a time when the allies reach the end of supply lines in their seven army race to Berlin.

At the same time Stimson reported United States combat casualties have reached 872,862, an increase of 13,275 during the last week. This includes 780,043 army casualties and 92,819 in the navy, marine, and coast guard.

Up to March 1 World War II. had taken the lives of more American men in combat than the Civil war, previously the costliest in the nation's history. The army lists 153,791 killed and the navy, 35,750. The aggregate for the two services since Pearl Harbor is 189,541, almost 3,000 above the 186,771 listed as killed in the Union and Confederate armies and the Union navy during the Civil war.

Since the invasion of France, Stimson said the allies have taken a total of 1,120,503 German prisoners in western Europe.

The American casualty table follows:

	Army	Navy	Total
Killed	153,791	35,750	189,541
Wounded	473,669	42,302	515,971
Missing	86,355	10,500	96,855
Prisoners	66,328	4,267	70,495
Totals	780,043	92,819	872,862

Stimson estimated more than 300,000 Japs have been killed or taken prisoner in the Philippines. He gave no figures on German dead and wounded.

REDS REPORTED INSIDE AUSTRIA IN VIENNA DRIVE

Smash Within 43 Miles of Capital

LONDON, March 30 [Friday]—(AP)—Russian armored columns, plunging within 43 miles of Vienna, reached the Austrian frontier yesterday in a 20 mile dash across western Hungary, uprooted three of the Austrian capital's outer fortresses, and cut across a vital German supply line to Italy.

Outflanking Nazi defenses based on the Bratislava gap and the Neusiedler see [lake] southeast of Vienna, the Red army captured the border town of Koszeg, toppled the key Hungarian rail city of Szombathely, and won the fortified Hungarian town of Kapuvar in the closest approach to Vienna. The capital's key outpost of Sopron, at the southwestern edge of the Neusiedler see also was outflanked and cut off from the south.

Report Reds Over Border

The Free Austrian radio said that Marshal Tolbukhin's 3d Ukrainian army spearheads already had invaded Austria. The broadcast said the Russians had swept into Burgenland province and occupied several villages.

Moscow and Berlin reports also said Russian tanks, mobile guns, and motorized infantry from two armies were plunging toward Vienna thru broken enemy lines on both sides of the Danube.

On the north bank, Berlin said that the northern wing of Marshal Malinovsky's 2d Ukrainian army had lunged 17 to 25 miles west of the Hron river and had attempted to cross the Nitra river at points 47 to 52 miles east of Bratislava, Slovak capital, in a powerful offensive as yet unconfirmed by Moscow.

Gain on 118 Mile Front

As these forces drove toward the Bratislava gap, the Danube valley between Bratislava city and the northern shores of Neusiedler see, Tolbukhin's army on the south bank advanced across Hungary on a 118 mile front and swept up more than 100 villages.

His troops drove to within 140 miles of the Italian border and 55 miles east of the Austrian mountain city of Graz. While spearheads pushed to within 29 miles of Yugoslavia, and cut the supply route to Italy by taking Szombathely, others at the southern end of the front captured Rezi, west of Lake Balaton.

At the front's northern end, the capture of Kapuvar in a 10 mile advance put Red army tanks 10 miles east of the southern tip of the Neusiedler see. The Raba and Rabca river lines in this area also were cracked.

Mop Up E. Prussian Pocket

Moscow also announced that Marshal Vasilevsky's 3d White Russian army had completed the mop up of the coastal pocket in East Prussia southwest of embattled Koenigsberg. More than 130,000 enemy troops were killed or captured in 18 days of battle, the Russians said.

Marshal Rokossovsky's 2d White Russian army captured 18,500 Germans as the Russians battered deeper into the eastern half of Danzig and wiped out a number of coastal pockets along Danzig bay north of captured Gdynia.

[A German broadcast, reported by the federal communications commission, declared that the city of Danzig has "fallen into soviet hands."]

The Germans said earlier that Danzig's harbor installations had been "completely destroyed."

Nazis Give Up Bridgehead

The Germans claimed that the Red army's central Oder river front was ready to erupt in a full attack on Berlin and said that elements of the 2d and 3d White Russian armies were being dispatched from East Prussia and the embattled Danzig area to join Marshal Zhukov's 1st White Russian army before the German capital.

Enemy broadcasts said that a German bridgehead on the east bank of the Oder in a bend in the river at Zehlen, 32 miles northeast of Berlin, had been evacuated.

The Red army, Berlin said, had driven to the river's bank at a point only 29 miles northeast of Berlin and had attempted to cross the river there.

JUSTICE OFFICE PROBES RECORD OF DONALD DAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., March 29 — James M. McInerney, assistant chief of the department of justice criminal division, disclosed today that his division is investigating the case of Donald Day, one time Chicago Tribune European correspondent, who is accused of broadcasting Nazi propaganda from German controled radio stations.

If sufficient evidence is found, Day is to be indicted for treason against the United States. In that event, the army would be asked by the justice department to seek and arrest Day, McInerney said.

McInerney said the justice department had not asked the army to arrest Day yet because there is no warrant outstanding for the former correspondent. He said transcripts of Day's broadcasts were being studied to determine whether a treason indictment should be sought.

Study Allegiance Question

Treason cannot be proved against a person who has renounced his allegiance to the United States, McInerney explained. He said it had not been determined whether Day has renounced such allegiance, but that the department's investigation was expected to develop that point.

Army G-2 [intelligence] is ferreting out American citizens in occupied territory who have committed acts against the United States and they are being tried by civil or military courts in the areas in which they are apprehended. The justice department does not act in such overseas prosecutions, McInerney said.

Eight Americans Sought

Army authorities have been asked by the justice department to arrest and return to this country eight Americans who were indicted for treason in District of Columbia Federal court in July, 1943, McInerney said.

The eight, accused of broadcasting axis propaganda, included Ezra Pound, aged American poet who aligned himself with the Italian Fascists early in the war. The others were Robert H. Best, Frederick Wilhelm Kaltenbach, Jane Anderson, Douglas Chandler, Constance Drexel, Edward Leo Delaney, and Max Otto Koischwitz.

REMOVED FROM PAY ROLL

Donald Day, former Chicago newspaperman, served for 21 years as THE TRIBUNE'S correspondent in Latvia, Estonia, Lithuania, Poland, Sweden, and Finland, but was removed from the pay roll of this newspaper on Sept. 7 1942, after he refused to obey repeated orders to return to America following Finland's alliance with Nazi Germany in the war on Russia.

Thru the state department THE TRIBUNE arranged transportation for Day's return, together with a visitor's visa for Mrs. Day, a Latvian. A bank in Stockholm, Sweden, was authorized to provide Day with necessary travel money.

Three Cables Sent

Three cablegrams were sent Day before he replied. THE TRIBUNE cabled him at Stockholm on Aug. 25, 1942: "Return America earliest possible. Acknowledge." The next day's cable read: "Acknowledge Aug. 25 message summoning you America." The following day he was advised by cable: "We have arranged transportation for you America."

On Sept. 1, 1942, Day cabled from Helsinki asking that he be "granted leave without pay or be placed on pension" and said he had applied to enlist in the Finnish army. The next day THE TRIBUNE wirelessed him: "Refusal to obey instructions will automatically sever your connections with TRIBUNE. If you want to enter army you can do so in army of your country here. Acknowledge."

Decides to Remain

Day's answer came four days later. It said: "I deeply regret your decision, but under the present circumstances think it best that I remain here." The next day after his final refusal to return home Day was removed from The Tribune pay roll.

After THE TRIBUNE'S recall of Day, American authorities in Stockholm notified him his passport had lapsed. So far as the United States was concerned he became a man without a country.

FOOT SOLDIER HAILED AS GUTS OF WHOLE ARMY

Thomas Furness.

Thomas Furness of 33 E. Bellevue pl., Red Cross field director who has been serving with the 1st division for nearly three years and who went thru the North African, Sicilian, and Normandy invasions, yesterday spoke with awe of the services which the infantry has rendered in this war.

Furness, a veteran of the first World war and a broker on the Chicago Stock exchange between wars, has returned to Chicago where he will continue his Red Cross work on a part time basis.

"The infantry is the guts of the whole army," he said. "They're the people who go in and hold the ground."

Furness spoke warmly of the Red Cross girls he had seen working in the European theater. They go as near the lines as army regard for their own safety and the safety of the soldiers will permit, he said.

"If the girls had their way," he added, "they'd be serving doughnuts and coffee in the foxholes."

SEEK TO TRACE FUNDS BACKING GLOBAL REGIME

Humber Plan Is Believed Losing Ground

BY ARTHUR EVANS
(Chicago Tribune Press Service)

Jefferson City, Mo., March 29—Interest was shown by legislators today in the question of how a lobbying campaign is being financed in aid of a pending joint resolution which proposes a global super-state in which America would relinquish its national sovereignty to a world sovereignty. Action on the resolution, which is promoted by Robert Lee Humber, a lawyer in Paris, France, for 16 years, was again deferred today and the legislature adjourned over Easter to April 9.

Some house members report the measure appears to be losing ground, despite much buttonholing by Humber earlier in the session. They say that when it comes to the floor it will meet strong opposition.

Humber, who says his plan has already been indorsed by 12 states in the last four years and is pending in 10 others, has now carried his super-state crusade to the Minnesota legislature.

Claims It's Self-Financed

In St. Paul yesterday, in answer to a question, he told a Tribune correspondent that he is "entirely self-financed."

When the resolution comes up, the spearhead of the opposition is expected to be Roy Hamlin of Hannibal, Democratic minority leader. Mr. Hamlin today said he will seek definite information on how the super-state campaign meets its expenses.

"When it comes up," he said, "I shall try to ascertain the source of the funds that finance this campaign in which so much activity is being shown. It is a matter of interest to the public."

Hamlin said the Humber followers are still trying to build political fires under him in Hannibal in an effort to stop his fight against the measure.

Committee Action Hinted

Some of Humber's acquaintances express the opinion the Missouri state committee for world federation, at St. Louis, is active in the promotion work in the state for the federation idea. Its chairman is F. R. Von Windegger, president of the Plaza bank, St. Louis, who says that it has a membership of about 15,000 in Missouri, that no dues are required, and that all persons on the mailing list are regarded as members.

Humber in St. Louis last fall addressed a "St. Louis win the peace forum," and made such an impression that the forum voted to reconstitute itself as a "world federation" body to further the plan for a global state.

Some of his admirers here speak of him as an "evangelist." He got permission to address the house here soon after the legislature convened. His resolution with a long preamble was introduced and the resolutions committee sent it back to the house without recommendation. Three times it has been informally set for action, but each time it has been deferred.

Assailed by Jeffersonian

Little attention was paid to the matter, until Lee Meriwether of St. Louis, president of the Jeffersonians, sent a letter to legislators excoriating the Humber resolution. He spoke particularly of one paragraph under which each nation in the world government would "suppress its military, naval, and air forces, retaining only a constabulary sufficient to police its territory."

Meriwether charged this was a proposal to "give away with the pen the independence Washington won for us with the sword."

Hamlin today pointed to a clause in the Humber proposal which says "the age of treaties is dead; the age of laws is here. Civilization now requires laws in place of treaties."

"The resolution memorializes congress to work for the creation of federation of the world and asks the President to initiate procedure to formulate a constitution for this world federation," Hamlin said. "Can it be they propose to abolish our United States Constitution? We couldn't have two constitutions. I find this one of the most objectionable phases of the resolution."

Cites Small Business as Best U. S. Barrier to Communism

Matthew Woll.

America's security against communism, which is infiltrating big business and winning sympathy and respectability from wealthy men who hope for post-war trade with Russia, lies in the protection of the nation's great middle class and the revival and rehabilitation of small business, Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, said yesterday in an interview.

Woll repeated the charges he made a week ago in an address before the Rotary club of New York City that prospects of trade with Russia have resulted in "communist penetration of conservative business groups, and a tendency to regard criticism of communism as somehow detrimental to the war effort."

Declines Specific Instances

He declined, however, to give specific instances of communistic infiltration in large industries, banks, churches, cultural bodies, radio stations, newspapers, and other institutions controled by men of property because, he said, it was impossible for an individual to summon witnesses and force them to talk.

"Sometimes you may have perfectly good evidence," he said, "but you can't always produce it in court."

Woll said he was not surprised that some large corporations, controled by a few men, were giving communism a sympathetic hearing. He said Russia holds out rich trade possibilities and "American capital is not going to antagonize its immediate trade prospects."

He declared he feared American capital will make investments in Europe after the war and then invade the American market from there.

Modernization in Europe.

"Europe is going to modernize its industrial structure," he said. "It is going to produce things efficiently. The prohibitive tariffs between small European states will be dropped and modern methods will be adopted. Europe still will have its supply of cheap labor.

"American capital will want a hand in this European development, but it is likely to reflect upon us. The tendency of American capital to work back from Europe had started before the war. I know of one manufacturer who had two factories in America and moved one of them to Scotland. When the war started, he was ready to export his product, made in Scotland, back to America, taking the profit that lower wages over there gave him."

Woll said it is the large corporations—not small firms—that are looking forward to foreign trade after the war and therefore are susceptible to communistic influence in the hopes of winning Russia as a customer. He said it is "imperative" for America to encourage and develop the small manufacturer rather than the large.

Government Control Danger

"It is true that large corporations often can produce more economically," he said, "but the question is whether that economy justifies itself. It must not be allowed to stifle all ambition. That is what has happened in Russia, and it leads to totalitarianism."

1ST DYED CHICK CASE CONTINUED UNTIL APRIL 6

The first case to be brought into court under the new city ordinance prohibiting the sale or display of dyed chicks was continued yesterday in Desplaines st. court until April 6. The continuance was requested by Atty. Abel V. Kretske for his client, Sam Rubin, owner of a pet and poultry store at 833 Maxwell st., so that he might have time to examine the ordinance. Two chicks, one green and one pink, were shown to Judge Michael Tremko by officials of the Anti-Cruelty society, which caused Rubin's arrest.

Girl, 17, Hurt in Plunge to Escape Detectives

Georgia Lee Hall, 17, a ward of the Juvenile court, leaped from a second floor bathroom window in her home at 3023 Walnut st. yesterday to elude detectives who called to take her to court in a delinquency investigation. She suffered back injuries and was taken to County hospital.

REALTY URGES TAX PROVISION IN SLUM PLANS

Suggest Amendments to Avert Dangers

As a city council committee yesterday heard proposals for amending the neighborhood redevelopment corporation act, opposition developed among real estate men and builders to the new slum clearance program sponsored by Mayor Kelly and Gov. Green.

The Kelly-Green program calls for an appropriation of five million dollars by the city, to be matched by the state, to buy slum property by condemnation for resale or lease to the public housing authorities and others. Legislation to carry out this program, passed by the state senate Tuesday, calls a special election in Chicago June 4 to authorize the special five million dollar bond issue.

Spokesmen for the real estate and building industry asserted that the Kelly-Green program favors public housing, which enjoys tax exemption, and that private enterprise will be unable to meet such competition.

Realty Men File Objections

The Kelly-Green bills, real estate men added, provide virtually no restrictions on the type of housing development that may be undertaken. On the other hand, the existing neighboring redevelopment act provides for strict municipal supervision of projects under its provision. This means, the critics asserted, that the neighborhood act will be a dead letter if the new bills are adopted.

"The Kelly-Green bills might be all right if they were amended," said J. Soule Warterfield, former president of the real estate board. He suggested an amendment to provide that "all properties resold by the city, leased, or exchanged for private occupancy shall be subject to the same taxes as privately owned real estate."

Tax Provision Advocated

Without such provision, he said, 22 square miles of the most valuable property in the city might gain tax exemption, because there is nothing in the bills that would prevent the city from reselling to public housing authorities.

Warterfield also proposed a provision making it mandatory for the city to sell property acquired under the program to the highest bidder within two years.

County Assessor John Clark, who has sought unsuccessfully to collect taxes from public housing authorities, also favored an amendment for resale to the highest bidder. "Tax exemption is merely piling the load on other taxpayers," he asserted.

'MARTYR' FINED $100 AS A RESULT OF CRUCIFIXION

Fred Walcher, 46, crusader for a new world peace order, stood mute yesterday in E. Chicago av. police court when Judge Victor A. Kula levied a fine of $100 and costs against him on a disorderly conduct charge arising from a crucifixion hoax arranged to win attention to his plan. A motion to vacate the fine was entered and the hearing set for April 6 after Atty. William J. Grace protested that Walcher had been improperly charged.

Walcher was arrested after confessing on March 9 that for publicity purposes he had permitted three of his followers to nail him to a cross beneath an elevated road structure near his home at 1638 N. Halsted st. During his first arraignment the court ordered a psychiatric examination.

The report of Dr. David B. Rotman given the court charged the "martyr" was an unstable and psychopathic individual and a "ne'er-do-well" and recommended mental treatment. The report also expressed the belief that Walcher was a tool of a fanatical group trying to promote a "fly-by-night" economic panacea.

THE QUESTION

If you were an employer would you hire yourself and why?

WHERE ASKED

THE ANSWERS

Kay Hicks, product designer, 6383 Sheridan rd.—Well, I think I would. I can't think of any logical reason why I would, except that there would be a girl looking for a job, and if she was willing to work, I'd be willing to give her a chance. If I were the employer I could always fire me later if I didn't measure up to expectations.

Jackie Pieper, product designer, 6383 Sheridan rd.—Why, of course! I'd hire me because help is so scarce. I look like the good reliable type who would stay with an employer for years and years and never get married—the homely type—a good, solid career girl. How could an employer ask for any more than that?

Harry A. Jay, manufacturer's representative, 5820 Kenmore av.—Heavens, no! I'd want everything to go right if I were the employer, and I'm not the man for the job. I wouldn't want to depend on me. I feel the same about time off as a boss would. If he took the afternoon off, I'd wait until he left and then leave too.

Carl Nathan, cigar store proprietor, 2128 N. Sawyer av.—Absolutely, yes—I'd hire myself. I've never been fired from a job in my life and I've had quite a few. I've had a good education and if I say I think I can do a job I probably can. I worked my way up from an employe to an employer, which proves I knew how to work.

Elaine Frankel, student, 6443 Bosworth av.—If I couldn't fill a position I wouldn't apply for it. A good employe should be neat, dependable, honest, and able to get along with others—in addition to being capable and interested in the company for which he works. Being all these I would say to myself: "You're hired."

CURFEW-DEFYING THEATER OWNER TO APPEAL CASE

Toledo, O., March 29 [Special]—Jack O'Connell, owner of the curfew-flouting Loop theater, said today he would appeal the formal notice of the war man power commission, served on him yesterday, directing him to close his theater at midnight. The notice, verifying verbal orders of the WMC, is a step in the legal machinery being moved against O'Connell, who has kept his theater open after midnight for the last 10 days.

The defiant movie operator, who has the support of the city's war plant workers in keeping open a post-midnight show, said he had "nothing to lose" in appealing the order to state WMC headquarters. He is allowed five days to file an appeal, during which time State WMC Director John L. Craig indicated a threatened zero employment ceiling for the theater will not be imposed.

Three WMC inspectors appeared at the theater this afternoon and were permitted by O'Connell to examine his employment records. A bookkeeper previously had refused this permission in the owner's absence. O'Connell said he has received offers of volunteer labor to keep his theater going if the government compels his employes to quit.

STRIKE CALLED TO 'HURT FIRM' IS CALLED OFF

Frank Powers, president of the United Stove Workers union, who explained last Tuesday that he had called a strike against the Cribben & Sexton company, producers of 105 millimeter shells and other war materials, because "the more I can hurt management, the better," last night boasted that his strike had brough the company to terms. He said he would send the strikers back into the plant tomorrow morning to resume production.

The 31 year old union head, who has a 2-A draft classification because of his union job, had called the union's 850 members out Monday morning, "to force the company to grant them a pension plan." The company refused to discuss pensions for the shop workers, Powers said.

Union Leader Claims Victory

Late yesterday Powers announced he had a telegram from Edgar L. Warren, regional director of the war labor board, in which Warren notified Powers that the company would negotiate a pension plan if the strikers would return to work. If the negotiations failed it was agreed that the pension plan argument would be given to the WLB for final disposition.

"In view of this telegram from the WLB, the union is of the opinion that we are victorious in our claims," Powers said last night after a meeting of the union's executive board, "and that the management must negotiate in good faith with us.

Company Silent on Settlement

"They indicate that they are now willing to negotiate on a pension plan for our shop workers. That is all we wanted in the first place. A return to work meeting will be held at 1 p. m. today. I will tell the workers to get back into the plant."

None of the company officers was available for comment. The company had contented itself since the start of the strike with the issuance of unsigned statements that termed the strike "regrettable."

United States Atty. Woll, asked yesterday if he was going to prosecute Powers under the Smith-Connally act for calling the strike without first waiting for the 30 day cooling off period and then holding a secret strike ballot, stated that he "had no comment to make."

National Board Can Act.

The regional board can request the national WLB to instigate action thru Woll's office.

A strike of several hundred workers at the Borg and Beck company, 6558 Menard av., Cicero, a war materials manufacturing plant, continued yesterday. The walkout started Monday in a dispute over wages.

Another war plant strike, which began in a dispute over the interpretation of a WLB wage directive, was settled when 45 workers returned to the Frost Rubber company shop, 1415 Dayton st.

Falling Rock Pinions Boy, 14, Playing at Lake

A large rock fell on Joseph Kolacinski, 14, of 8335 Burley av., while he was playing at 79th st. and the lake yesterday. It took his two companions and three men to lift the boulder so he could hobble home. Grand Crossing police located him after a search of the neighborhood and took him to South Shore hospital for treatment of a possibly fractured leg.

PARKS REPORT 5 MILLION CUT IN THEIR DEBT

Debt of the Chicago park district, exclusive of interest and tax anticipation warrants outstanding, decreased $5,798,673.32 last year to total $62,776,450.49 at the beginning of 1945, said a statement issued yesterday by the park board.

From May 1, 1934, to Dec. 31, 1944, the total debt exclusive of tax warrants and interest decreased $44,969,874.67. Funded debt liability was reduced $5,865,315.82 in 1944, and $42,794,070.47 in the long term period. At the beginning of this year, the funded debt liability amounted to $59,958,296.99.

The park board's floating debt at the beginning of 1945 amounted to $2,818,153.50, an increase of $66,642.50 over the 1944 figure; for the long term period, the floating debt showed a decrease of $2,175,804.20.

1,350 JUMP JOBS IN ILLINOIS; 487 PUT ON WAR LIST

Twenty-six draft registrants, who left essential jobs without permission of their boards, have been sent to Camp Ellis for labor assignment, Col. Paul G. Armstrong, state director of selective service, reported yesterday. He warned that these inductions will continue as long as the local boards have job jumpers available.

Up to March 21, Col. Armstrong said, 1,350 job jumpers were examined at the Chicago induction station; of this group 487 were found qualified for general military service and will be processed. Those found acceptable for labor service numbered 648, and 215 were either rejected or held over for special examination.

Col. Armstrong advised registrants to realize the necessity for obtaining local board permission in writing before changing jobs.

WASP SURVIVOR FOUND GUILTY OF ARMED ROBBERY

A jury of six men and six women in Criminal court yesterday convicted James J. Jobe, a medically discharged sailor, who survived the sinking of the aircraft carrier, Wasp, on a charge of armed robbery.

Jobe confessed that Feb. 24 he lured David Levin, automobile sales manager, to his north side hotel on the pretext he had an automobile to sell, slugged Levin, and robbed him of $520.

Jobe's attorney, Julius Sherwin, said his client had suffered a mental blackout, and pleaded for leniency in view of the defendant's service record.

The jury convicted Jobe on a charge of armed robbery, which carries the punishment of a prison term from 1 year to life.

OPEN HOUSE QUIZ INTO U.S. ABILITY TO FEED EUROPE

All Phases of Shortages Under Investigation

Washington, D. C., March 29 (AP)—House investigators organized today to learn just how much rationed America can afford to feed hungry people abroad.

Rep. Anderson.

A special committee headed by Rep. Anderson [D., N. M.] will cover the whole field of food, he said, to learn the causes of shortages "so that corrective action may be taken promptly."

"The committee will review the food procurement and stockpiling policies of war agencies," said Anderson. "It will inquire into any possible foreign relief feeding commitments and examine policies that may govern the shipment of food abroad."

With this background, his statement added, "the committee will then turn its attention to specific groups of commodities such as meats, dairy products, fats and oils, sugar and canned fruits, and vegetables."

Conference at White House

International commitments of which Rep. Anderson spoke were the topic of a White House conference between President Roosevelt and two British cabinet ministers, J. J. Llewellin of food and Oliver Lyttelton of production. British Ambassador Halifax sat in.

They came here at the President's suggestion as part of Roosevelt-Churchill efforts to find "means of dealing with the food shortages in liberated areas," as the White House put it.

Lyttelton said afterward that "the electric victories of the armies are going to make it a very urgent matter" to appraise supply conditions fully.

A reporter asked whether allied food supplies are going to stretch far enough to care for liberated countries. Lyttelton replied that the fighting forces and belligerent populations supporting them must be looked after first.

Denies British Surplus

Asked whether there was any truth in a story from England that the British supply of meats and fats is more ample than the American ration, Llewellin replied:

"As minister of food, I wish it were."

As for the possibility of getting more food from Canada for liberated areas, Llewellin said the dominion already has made available immense supplies. And he said that much more wheat will go over when shipping can be found.

Secretary of War Stimson told his news conference the army is now feeding more prisoners of war, allied personnel, and rescued axis prisoners than ever anticipated. This demand, he said, had driven down army food stocks to such a point that a breakdown in supply lines could be dangerous.

Slaughtering Edict Upset

Elsewhere on the complicated food front the Emergency Court of Appeals, created by the stabilization act to act on OPA regulations, ruled invalid a part of the OPA price ceiling on the beef industry.

The court declared that slaughterers who produced only fresh beef can't break even under their wholesale ceilings, and therefore the regulations should be set aside.

The wholesale price ceilings for "processing packers" were upheld, however. These are firms which produce not only fresh beef, but by-products such as tallow, oil, sausage, etc. OPA estimated that these companies handle 85 per cent of the nation's beef.

The court ruling as to nonprocessors [fresh-beef-only firms] has no immediate effect on prices to consumers. The judgment of the court is not effective for 30 days. In the meantime OPA can make adjustments in the ceilings in line with the decision, ask a rehearing, or—if denied that—appeal to the Supreme court.

The senate banking committee today approved extension of price controls another year past June 30, leaving it up to the office of price administration to work out adjustments in policies to which some business groups have objected.

In still another food action, the war food administration set up an "office of investigatory services." This followed statements in congress that information leaks had enabled speculators to make millions in the grain markets.

This new office is charged with preventing speculation, profiteering, and fraud in WFA transactions.

INDICT MEDLEY ON 2 COUNTS IN WOMAN'S DEATH

Washington, D. C., March 28 (AP)—Joseph Dunbar Medley, 45, was indicted today for the first degree murder of Mrs. Nancy Boyer.

The grand jury returned two indictments against the escaped Michigan convict. The first charges him with murdering Mrs. Boyer in her apartment while committing a robbery, with premeditated murder, and with robbing her of an $800 ring. The second charges him with fleeing to Pittsburgh, Pa., to evade prosecution for murder and robbery.

If he is convicted on either of the first two counts of the murder indictment, a sentence of death in the electric chair is mandatory. He pleaded innocent at his arraignment late today.

Medley, brought here after his arrest in a St. Louis, Mo., hotel March 18, is a suspect in the death of a woman in New Orleans, La., and is wanted by Chicago police for questioning in connection with the death of a woman there.

NEW CHICAGO'S CHAPLAIN BUILDS FIGHTING MEN

His Ideal Crew Is One with Ideals

BY FRANK CIPRIANI

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

AT SEA ABOARD THE NEW U. S. CRUISER CHICAGO—[Delayed]—Lt. Comdr. Francis G. Doerschug, chaplain of this ship, is a man of peace, yet a fighting parson who believes that one of his jobs is to make fighting men out of the Chicago's crew.

A Presbyterian minister who was born in Minneapolis but now calls Manlius, N. Y., his home, he knows war. To him a crew is as good as its ideals.

"A chaplain should not be merely a glad hander, a hail fellow well met," said Chaplain Doerschug. "He should be some one who is deeply interested in the fundamentals and characteristics of the every day man.

Gate Opened to Religion

"Our men in service are going thru experiences today that are forming their character. They are getting religion that they didn't get in the last war. They are seeing and feeling things as never before. They enter the service as boys, are in it as men, and come out as men. This is their period of transformation. They need guidance.

"If ever men of the churches have an opportunity to do something in religion, they've got it now. For myself, I've done more in three years than I could have in 50 in ordinary pastorates."

Many Think of Home

Chaplain Doerschug said that many men constantly think of home. Some have mistrusted their wives, and some wives have mistrusted their husbands. Yet, he said, it's simple for an understanding chaplain to straighten out those mutual distrusts. A few thoughtful words in a letter does the job, he said. And then, he said, you have a better fighting man.

"Once more it's a case of kindness," the chaplain went on. "I have a profound belief in kindness. Most of the difficulties of a personal nature can be solved by kindness. Say kind things in letters home, and the answers will be kind. That is part of practical religion."

Chaplain Doerschug sounded a note of warning both to service men and the folk at home for the time the fighters return. The average fighter will expect to find his wife the same as when he left her, but he is wrong there. She probably has been working, she has tasted independence—and she has grown older. The fighter has been away, has seen life at its worst, and he too has grown older. Both wife and husband have changed; neither will seem the same at the war's end.

Then comes a period of readjustment. It will take three or four months. Then, believes Chaplain Doerschug, the two will refind their old levels and in their rediscovered selves find a more complete love and happiness.

RETIRED BROKER FREED BY JUDGE IN MORALS CASE

In an advanced hearing of the case, Judge George B. Weiss in Domestic Relations court yesterday dismissed a charge of disorderly conduct against Joseph T. Bowen Jr., 56, of 434 Washington rd., Lake Forest, retired insurance broker.

Bowen was arrested a month ago in the Clark theater, Clark st., near Madison st., on complaint of Policeman Edward [illegible]rby, who was assigned to the theater to guard against sex offenses. He said Bowen molested him, but the retired broker asserted he touched the policeman by mistake as they sat side by side in the theater.

The case previously had been continued until April 27, but Judge Weiss said he wanted to conclude the hearing as he is leaving Domestic Relations court.

If Your Advertising Can Influence Him

There's only one thing that makes prosperity. That's money.

There is only one thing that makes money. That's work.

To have work—enough work for all—we have to sell 50 per cent more than we did in our best peacetime year.

And this is the only way to an America of lasting prosperity.

In that picture above, you're face to face with the man who can swing it—the Wage Earner. He has the money—now—today. In figures, his saved-up billions add up to four times what all America had saved back in 1918.

He's the new buying power in the land. Shortages have built a huge backlog of buying pressure to launch his spending. Combine his spending ability and his unfilled wants—and you've got the raw materials to write off depression for a generation—perhaps forever.

Still, it's up to your advertising—literally to raise the standard of living in America a notch higher than it's ever been before. It's up to your advertising to do a new kind of selling job—to give these new millions brand new tastes, to re-furbish millions of American homes inside and out, to set up horizons broader than the Wage Earner millions have ever known.

There is only one way your message can influence the most of them best—and the best of them—most. It's in an atmosphere, a setting already friendly to them and close to their hearts. These millions trust and respect Macfadden Publications because they were the first to bring them their own lives . . . their own stories . . . their own deepest aspirations in magazine form.

No other magazines reach more of them. No other magazines in America today have greater power to influence the Wage Earner millions.

HOUSEWIVES SET OWI STRAIGHT ON MEAT SHORTAGE

Say They Can Buy Less Than Agency Thinks

Mrs. Roosevelt's Idea

Washington, D. C., March 29 (AP)—The food situation came up at Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's news conference today and she made this comment: "If we would just eat the British ration for one month all over this country we would be much more satisfied with what we have."

Office of war information figures showing British civilians receive more meat in a week than American families of the same size only partly tell the story, a hundred Chicago housewives agreed yesterday. Virtually all of them estimated their meat purchases as less than OWI figured.

Principal disadvantages cited for American family shoppers were the difficulty of finding meat at all and having to cover butter or butter substitutes with meat points. A family of five in England receives weekly, in addition to the meat ration, a pound of bacon, a pound of margarine, and half a pound each of lard, butter, and cheese.

In a dispatch carrying the OWI statement, which was issued in London, E. R. Noderer, Tribune correspondent, said that meat was always available in England to the full extent of the ration. Chicago housewives said meat has become so scarce there is a temptation to squander points when any is found.

British Lead in Most Types

While the British ration system is in terms of money instead of point, OWI made the comparison in pounds of meat and showed the following weekly allowances for a person available to present values:

Best beef, in the United States, 1⅞ pounds; Britain, 2¼ pounds. Cheapest beef, United States, 6½ pounds; Britain, 7. Lamb roast, United States, 2 5/7 pounds; Britain, 3½. Pork chops, United States, 2 pounds; Britain, 2½. Veal roast, United States, 4 pounds; Britain, 2½.

Against these OWI estimates of meat for Americans, Chicago housewives on the basis of experience said that a full ration of meat was possible only if they were lucky enough to find it, if they stretched the points by using butter substitutes and if they ate out sometimes.

What Housewives Report

Typical comments follow:

Mrs. Alfred Schroeder, 1706 Juneway ter.—Three adults in the family. We use margarine and average two pounds of meat a week.

Mrs. Frank A. Feeley, 1248 58th av., Cicero—Three adults and one child. Some weeks no meat to be had; other weeks, from five to six pounds for the family.

Mrs. Patrick Palmo, 1334 Woodlawn av., East Chicago Heights—Five in the family. One pound of bacon, five pounds of lunch meat and six pounds of whatever I can find.

Mrs. Harold Esler, 3129 54th av., Cicero—No butter, but I believe the children should have it. Four in the family and I can spend about 10 points a day for meat.

Each Get a Pound a Week

Mrs. Blanche Whitney, 7526 N. Ashland av.—I work a night shift in a war plant and when I get to the stores there is no meat left. My sister, with whom I live, and I get about one pound each a week.

Mrs. Lillian Erickson, 1508 Fargo av.—Two in the family; daughter lunches downtown; uses all red points for butter and one and a half pounds of meat for each person a week.

Mrs. Charles Spuck, Douglas av. and Hawthorne lane, Flossmoor—Four in family; one pound of bacon a week, two pounds of meat for Sunday and two pounds for the rest of the week.

Mrs. Donald R. Stohr, 18507 Stewart av., Flossmoor—Six and one-fourth pounds for four in the family, including one pound of bacon, a three pound Sunday roast, one pound of cold cuts and half a pound of frankfurters.

Mrs. L. L. McClain, 1514 Jonquil ter.—Two adults; uses all red points for butter and two chops apiece in a week.

Mrs. Lloyd Robblin, 14624 Harvey av., Harvey—I have red points, but I can't get more than a pound and a half a week for each of us.

Eggs and Hat for Easter

Carla Klingenmaier, 4 (left), and Marylin Budovic, 6, coloring Easter eggs with the aid of Nurse Virginia Larson in Children's Memorial hospital yesterday.

Clear Forecast

You won't have to carry an umbrella in that Easter parade. It's going to be mostly fair and warmer, E. S. Hanlon, weather observer, said yesterday in an early forecast for Sunday. Temperatures will be in the low 70's and no rain is indicated.

The forecaster warned, however, that his promise was based on an "if." Something is brewing in the southwest, he said, which might spoil things. "But it isn't likely," he added.

The Easter parade this year will be dotted again with trim columns of smartly stepping officers, privates, nurses, and women in uniform. At Fort Sheridan special services will be held, both Catholic and Protestant. At Great Lakes three special services will be held in the Ross auditorium and the Great Lakes choir will be picked up on an early morning G. I. Easter roundup broadcast.

More than 5,000 decorated Easter eggs, supplied by the Washburn Trade school students, will be placed in Easter baskets at the three Chicago service men's centers. Children from Chicago elementary schools are decorating eggs in art classes for the USO club, 131 S. Wabash.

RIPS MRS. F.D.R. AND WALLACE ON WILLIAMS' PUFFS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., March 29—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Commerce Secretary Wallace were given a Democratic rebuke in the senate today for attending a dinner at which the senate was criticized for its refusal to confirm Aubrey Williams as rural electrification administrator.

The dinner, at which Williams was guest of honor, was held last night by the National Farmers' union.

Rising in the senate to protest the action of the President's wife in attacking senate procedure, Sen. Bilbo [D., Miss.] called the Williams gathering a "funereal dinner," and said:

"Some of the chief mourners alleged to have been present were Mrs. Roosevelt, Secretaries Wallace and Wickard [agriculture], and a distinguished Republican senator.

Calls Action "Bold"

"The secretary of commerce, who has just recently encountered considerable delay in getting over a senatorial hurdle was bold enough to declare that notwithstanding the very decided and affirmative rejection of Williams and his governmental philosophies by the senate, 'he need not worry about a job in the government.'

"Personally, I think that the head of any government agency, or even the President for that matter, would show very poor judgment in defying the goodwill of the senate, which refused to consent to the use of this man in the administration of governmental affairs, by giving Williams any appointment in the government.

Audacious Statement

"Mrs. Roosevelt's presence, together with her audacious statement that Williams is a leader of democracy, will be hard for a great many senators and Democratic leaders to understand. She asserted that the cause of liberalism 'had not even lost a round' in the defeat of Williams."

Bilbo warned that if the "mourners" wish to present Williams as the symbol of American liberalism, "the Democratic party will have to do a little house cleaning."

F.D.R. APPOINTS FOE OF ICKES TO CUSTOMS COURT

Washington, D. C., March 29 (AP)—Jed Johnson, 56 year old Democratic congressman from Oklahoma, was nominated by President Roosevelt today to a lifetime judgeship on the United States Customs court.

Johnson's service in congress has dated since 1927, punctuated from time to time by arguments with Interior Secretary Ickes' former Indian commissioner, John Collier.

Johnson has tangled with Ickes as chairman of the house appropriations subcommittee in charge of interior department funds—and it is no secret Ickes would be pleased to have the Oklahoman out of that spot. However, Johnson said the justice department assured him his feuding with Ickes had nothing to do with his appointment to the bench.

Sen. Moore [R., Okla.] said he expected the senate would consider the nomination of Johnson to the bench on Monday. Moore said he would not oppose confirmation of his Democratic colleague. The post pays $10,000 a year.

Good Friday —Its Meaning

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS
[Religion Editor]

Good Friday is set to show what God is like, what nature means, and what man is.

God is like Jesus Christ, whose sacrifice on the cross is relived today. Despite His suffering and death, He is deity. He took our human nature upon Himself with all of its temptations and imperfections. He did this in order that we may be fit to share His life, which He won for us by His sacrifice that fateful day. True, we must have faith such as will bring our life and action into accord with His purposes, if we are to win that crown of life.

God is like Christ in both suffering and great mindedness; in human sympathy that is quick to hear the sigh of failure and to see the tear of heart break. God is like Christ, whose mission to mankind was solely given to the least, last, and lost.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren ye have done it unto me.

"The last shall be first.

"I am come to seek and save that which was lost."

We are all three—least, last and lost—lost in the tumultuous movements of nature until that day, and gripped by sin. The law of nature is of tooth and claw, demanding abject obedience to dictatorial power of electric current, hurricane, and death. "In the midst of life we are in death," and nature's progress is full of pain; its cousin war!

The cross of Christ is the sum of sin of human nature and of the pain of nature's movements, and, at once, the cross redeems them. Good Friday and Easter are not two things, but one—like the two faces of the same coin. Atop Golgotha were raised the darkness of man's sin and the hopeless pain and death of nature, and there, by the alchemy of God, they were changed into the golden sunrise of Easter that no tomb could long hold.

FREEDOM FOR FILIPINOS

War Man Power Commissioner Paul V. McNutt, who was for a time high commissioner to the Philippines, last Friday proposed that the independence of the islands from United States control be deferred. Secretary of the Interior Ickes supported this view in testifying before a senate committee on Monday.

The Philippines became an American possession by purchase from Spain after the war in 1898. The promise was made then that the islands would be given their independence when they had demonstrated their capacity for self-government. By an act passed in 1934 they were authorized to set up a government which after July 4, 1946, should be completely independent of the United States. Manuel Quezon, first president of the commonwealth, sought repeatedly to make the separation immediate. An amendment to the 1934 act passed during Jap occupation permits the President to advance the date if he sees fit to do so.

The Philippines have earned their freedom and they ought to get it at once. As Brig. Gen. Romulo has said, only the people of his islands did not gloat over the fall of the white man. Unlike the natives of Burma, Indo-China, Singapore, and Java, the Filipinos joined in repelling the Japs and never surrendered to them. Their devotion to our side never wavered.

Any backtracking in our promises of freedom to our former colony would be an outrage to some real friends and would injure the prestige of America everywhere. McNutt and Ickes must be trying to give the British, French, and Dutch an excuse to retain their old conquests on the pretense that America is doing the same.

The Filipinos have earned the right to the freedom that has long been promised them and no excuse for delaying it can be a good one. They are also entitled to receive further tariff concessions than are provided under the existing law. For 32 years before 1941 all Philippine products were admitted free of duty except rice, which was banned; sugar in excess of 300,000 tons a year; and tobacco in excess of 150 million cigars a year. The independence law of 1934 sought to prepare for the day of independence by requiring the collection of a tax on exports to the United States which was to start at 5 per cent of the United States import duties in 1941 and run up to 25 per cent in 1946. The taxes thus collected were to be utilized in paying the Philippine debt. Limited quantities of sugar and some other products were to be admitted to the United States free of taxes in the preparatory period.

The tariff arrangements in effect between 1934 and 1941 ought to be resumed now for an extended period, lasting at least until the damages of the war have been made good. Likewise, the Philippine commonwealth deserves physical protection by us and that means that we must have the Japs excluded from every island south of Iwo and the Ryukyus group. We must occupy such bases as will permit us to fly fighters across the Pacific from Honolulu without the use of carriers and we must retain harbors in the Western Pacific for submarines and for ship repair docks.

On these terms we can give the Filipinos their freedom without exacting their economic ruin as a price and without exposing them to the fear that they may again be invaded by the Japanese. That will be a real freedom, calculated, among other things, to expose the imperialisms of Europe for the shameful and degrading systems they are all concerned in.

KEEP YOUR EYES ON THE BALL, SENATORS

The senate agricultural committee, which is investigating the virtual disappearance of meat from the American table, cast its collective eye across the border to the well-filled platters of our Canadian neighbors. The Canadian prospect is pleasing and the temptation to make comparisons strong. But the senators will be better advised if they confine their study to the United States. That is where the real trouble lies.

One of the food bunglers in the war food administration told the committee that when we sought Canadian meat for the United States, Canada embargoed the shipments. Canadians, however, have charged that they can't ship meat into this country because the farm lobby in Washington is blocking the import. There seems to be a standoff here, pending further information.

When one of the senators wanted to know why Canada isn't shipping more meat to England, so that this country will have to ship less, he was informed that the British have to pay for the meat they get from Canada. Perhaps this is true, even tho Canada is giving Britain a billion dollars a year as a gift. At any rate, it is hardly fair to criticize the Canadians because they are not daffy, nor, for that matter, hold it against the British for playing a sucker when the sucker volunteers.

Canada, furthermore, has a population about one-thirteenth that of the United States, altho a larger proportion of its people are engaged in agriculture and stock raising. If the Canadians put themselves on the same severe rations that we are on and gave us the meat, we wouldn't be any better off, relatively, than Europe would be if we put ourselves on European food standards, as Mr. Roosevelt urges us to do, and sent the bulk of our food supplies across the Atlantic.

If the senators let themselves be distracted by the Canadian situation, they will be taking their eyes off the ball. We lack meat today, not primarily because of what Canada is doing or not doing, not primarily because of lend-lease or extravagant buying for the services, not primarily because of black market operations, but primarily because the Roosevelt administration, from the start of the war, has so bungled its food policies and so tricked and abused food producers that this country is not producing anywhere near the amount of meat that it is capable of producing. That is the big defect and the one that congress should keep its eye on.

The meat industry and meat retailers have made a telling case against the stupid price policies of the OPA. Correction of those policies would abolish, or at least reduce, black market operations, save legitimate merchants and packers from being forced out of business, and get a better distribution of what meat we have. But that, again, is not the primary evil.

We are short of meat because the fatheaded burocrats in Washington planned it that way. They told the middle west cattle feeders, from the beginning of the war, that there was no place for them in our war economy and, in consequence, cattle come to market underweight and stringy. They double-crossed the hog farmers in the manipulation of price guarantees and, in consequence, the processing of pork in the Chicago packing house area this month fell to the lowest level in 61 years. The draft administrators pampered CIO unions and allowed war plants to hoard labor, while stripping the farms of too many of their young workmen, equal to the heavy tasks.

The husbandmen of the middle west have been so tricked, abused, and defrauded by Mr. Roosevelt and his burocrats that they have curtailed or abandoned stock raising and turned to other crops, principally grains, which involve less labor and promise sure profits. That's why there isn't any meat in the meat market. Until the trickery is ended and the farmers are convinced that the witless planners have been deprived of power to ruin their business, there won't be much more in the future.

THE MONEY CHANGERS

The list of Wall street bankers, corporation executives, and lawyers now occupying positions of authority in Washington is formidable, as any reader of Mr. Trohan's story Sunday may judge. Things have happened since March 4, 1933, when Mr. Roosevelt in his inaugural address said, "The money changers have fled from their high seats in the temple of our civilization. We may now restore that temple to the ancient truths. The measure of the restoration lies in the extent to which we apply social values more noble than mere monetary profit."

The gentleman with such an abhorrence of money changers now has four Wall streeters in his cabinet and the state department looks like a roster of the house of Morgan. There are good reasons. The cataclysm of a worldwide war has disrupted the organization and life of every nation, our own not excepted. The Roosevelt administration proposes to make over the world politically and, what is more pertinent to the Wall street interest, economically. There will be shifts in power and control. The Wall streeters are strategically placed to order these shifts and to profit from them.

There has already been evidence of the indecent impetuosity of some of these gentlemen to effect revisions in the existing big money power in certain fields. The consolidation of all 13 American radio, telegraph, cable, and press wireless companies into a monopoly of overseas communications, as urged by Secretary of the Navy Forrestal, an investment banker on leave from Wall street, is an indication of the way the wind is drifting. Mr. Forrestal's chief of naval communications, Rear Adm. Joseph R. Redman, has been very frank to admit that a period of upheaval caused by war is the time to put over such schemes.

Speaking before executives of the Radio Corporation of America, a highly interested beneficiary under the plan, Adm. Redman remarked, "It is at a time like this that we can make the changes that are difficult to bring about during normal times. . . . Therefore, let us be prepared with an appropriate program to accomplish our objectives."

The Wall streeters in Washington have been forehanded in drafting "an appropriate program" to govern practically everything else you care to think about. The keystone of the whole structure is the Dumbarton Oaks scheme for a so-called security organization. The security envisioned has little to do with world peace, but it has a great deal to do with the security of Wall street. This program is designed to have the United States meddling in the concerns of the whole world. Force could conceivably be employed to protect new investments, bail out old ones, and provide that "stability" which the international financier so highly desires, even if it is the stability of tyrannies under dictatorship.

The dozen and one international regulatory authorities which will have fingers in countless pies thruout the world will have wide advisory powers. If some of the high powered American members happen to know just the right banker to handle the financing of this or that development in Ruritania, or if the cocoa cartel needs a good lawyer and Washington lobbyist, who will be foolish enough to deny them?

The Washington spectacle, for these and other reasons equally good, presents the appearance of a pack of wolves whose appetites are whetted by the prospect of making gigantic fortunes out of the arrangements contemplated at the San Francisco security conference, other arrangements already made, and still others yet to be made. The American people are cautioned to proceed warily in putting their personal funds into international investment opportunities when the prospectuses begin to appear, as surely they will. They are advised in ordinary discretion to be careful about permitting global dispensations of their tax dollars. Experience should tell them that the money to be made isn't coming their way when there are so many insiders to be accommodated first.

GOOD FRIDAY LORE

The Good Friday theme in masterpieces of art offers a rich field of material for any qualified person who wishes to edit an anthology. For the poetry section, we recommend "The Second Crucifixion," by Richard Le Gallienne, and "A Ballad of Trees and the Master," by Sidney Lanier.

* * *

The subject has been treated so often in painting that we would not venture to offer a suggestion without taking a brush-up course in the old masters. There are any number of "Descents from the Cross" among which our first choice would be found. For "Crucifixions," see those of Fra Angelica, Pisano, Rubens, and Velasquez.

* * *

In orchestral music, "Good Friday Spell," from Wagner's "Parsifal," is an inevitable candidate for honorable mention. It has become traditional for symphony concerts in Holy Week. First-rate recordings can be found in the disk catalogs.

* * *

The drama has generally regarded this subject as beyond its reach, because its technique is too literal. There are, of course, the Passion Plays, especially that of Oberammergau, but these must be regarded as religious rituals whose audiences are not playgoers but pilgrims. The actors of Passion Plays, moreover, are usually amateurs.

* * *

We can remember only one play, professionally staged and acted, which dealt with the Good Friday tragedy directly: "The Terrible Meek," by Charles Rann Kennedy. This was given in the smaller theater of the Fine Arts building about 35 years ago. It represented a group of characters at the foot of the Cross, which was seen only at its base, and was a striking success in fulfilling its eloquent author's evangelistic purpose. But performances have been few.

IWO EPITAPH

Pass slowly, sun; here lies a Yankee lad,
Kentucky blood runs thick upon this hill,
And with this youth a bit of Texas fell,
And here a son of Oregon is still.

Fall gently, rain, this once forsaken soil
Now rooted is with prairie golden grain,
And seed from San Joaquin toppled here,
Here Dixie's boll lies scattered in white pain.

Blow softly, wind, re-echo in their sleep
The swish of summer thru palmetto trees,
The screech of eagles over Grand Coulee,
The laughter of the Loop's old revelries.

O, wind, and sun, and rain commemorate
With tender visitations this far shore—
Here where are fallen freedom's pioneers

The Little Woman Speaks

This, at last, is the spring in which my captain's Uncle said: "You're going home for a spell. These mountains and glaciers won't imprison you any longer. You have given me three of your Christmases up here and many months of your life. There were times when you thought I'd forgotten you, weren't there? But your Uncle is a busy man, with millions of nephews to look after, and it takes time. There isn't only Alaska, you know. Certainly it's cold, but you took it like a real soldier. To show you we're grateful for the job you did, we're going to send you to Florida. And you can take the little woman along as our guest. Have a good time."

It isn't long since I was walking thru the snow to the postbox with his letters, wondering how long it would be. Then one night I heard his voice over the radiophone and the 4,000 miles didn't exist any more. I knew that in a few days, or a week, I would see him. Joy needs an outlet, so I washed the kitchen walls and ceiling, and then I cleaned the basement.

Dear Uncle, thank you for his safe journey. Thank you for your wonderful sunshine, and thank you for keeping him near home for a while. Your remembering has made this a lovely spring! Frieda K. Zimmerman.

COUNTRY GRAVE

Under this final stone
Lies one whose life took form
From change: the season's round,
Star risings, drouth, and storm.

Who scanned the skies for rain
In June; could prophesy
How soon the snows would come
From watching the wild geese fly.

The ordered turnabout
Of bud, and bloom, and fruit,
Gave wonder and delight
To him whose being's root

Took hold on ancient things:
The young, green shoots of corn
Seemed the fresh miracles
They were in Eden's morn.

How can he sleep thus, when Once more above him now
Arcturus climbs the hill,
His fields await his plow?

W. E. P. asks: "Is there any explanation or definition available as to what is meant by the phrase 'indispensable and irreplaceable' as used in recent selective service announcements regarding deferments for registrants aged 18 thru 29?"

The definition is based on three contingencies: [a] "The job on which he [the registrant] is working cannot be dispensed with, in an activity that is included in the 'List of Essential Activities'; [b] he cannot be replaced from less essential work within the plant or by recruitment from without, and [c] a recruit or transferee cannot be qualified to perform his work thru three months of intensive training."

V. T. asks: "Can a veteran buy a car and a house trailer with a loan obtained under the G. I. law?"

WATCH FOR DIABETIC COMA

DURING the last 20 years a definite educational movement has been designed to better acquaint diabetics with their disease. One of the reasons for this policy was the ease with which physician-victims were able to care for themselves. From this observation, it was only natural to assume that if the lay person understood the disorder he could keep it under control.

Nowadays, many are thorely grounded on all phases of grams, calories, carbohydrates, proteins, and fats. They test their urine, watch the weight level, calculate and make substitutions in diet, and administer insulin according to the doctor's orders. With the use of this added knowledge, they appreciate the proper management and pitfalls of the handicap.

Barring accidents or illnesses common to every one, life expectancy approaches that of the normal individual. One emergency, however, may prove serious if it is not recognized and treated promptly—diabetic coma. Fortunately, the condition is preceded by a state of acidosis which can be determined by the patient well in advance of losing consciousness. And, what is more encouraging, it can be handled successfully. This must not be confused with insulin shock, in which the victim collapses from an overdose of the preparation.

The diabetic should know when to anticipate this situation. What are the early symptoms? How can it be detected? How can it be stopped? The answers to these questions should be as familiar to the sufferer as the A-B-C's.

If the victim exhibits any of the following signs he should be on the lookout for trouble: unusual fatigue, an inclination to rest or sleep by day, lack of appetite, nausea, vomiting, mental sluggishness, flushed face, changes in respiration, or a sweetish, acetonelike odor to the breath. Patients must also watch for this complication when they develop any infection, particularly the common cold, or when faced with a major or minor operation, a tooth extraction, vaccination, nervous shock, an emotional upset, or the omission of insulin when it is necessary.

During these events, the urine must be examined at least four times a day, preferably before meals and at bedtime. When sugar is found, the following simple test for acid is suggested: add 5 cc. of urine to 2cc. of a 10 per cent aqueous ferric chloride solution. If the mixture turns reddish brown to deep garnet, acid is present. A medical man should be consulted to obtain not only the materials but also the details of this procedure or others equally efficient.

Once the presence of acidosis has been established, by performing the simple laboratory tests, the physician should be contacted. Usually a temporary program is devised which will prevent the patient from lapsing into unconsciousness. This consists of lowering the intake of food, adequate liquids, and adjusting the dose of insulin. Some sufferers object to increasing the amount of this substance but it is better to be afraid of coma than of insulin reactions when a crisis exists.

SINUS AND CLIMATE

E. W. W. writes: You stated that a change of climate may benefit the allergic type of sinus disease. Will you explain how the dryness of the desert air is reconciled with the fact that a relative humidity of 50 per cent is advocated as being most comfortable for humans?

REPLY

A change in climate means getting away from the factors to which the sufferer is sensitive. A dry region will benefit only those who have swollen and boggy membranes whereas it will definitly aggravate those whose tissues are already parched.

SHE CHILLS

Mrs. F. writes: Every time I drink water or anything cold my whole body becomes chilled. Is this serious?

REPLY

LEG ULCERS

M. T. C. writes: What causes leg ulcers?

REPLY

They arise from a variety of infections and circulatory disorders. They are usually associated with varicose veins. By eliminating the cause, most ulcers heal promptly.

Education Ties the Tongue

A gentleman who has invented a new card game dropped in the other day, a pack of 52 cards in his hand. The first thing we knew the cards were being shuffled, and the two of us were at it. Never has this department spent a more ignominious morning, for the game dealt in words, supposedly the stock-in-trade of writers. Not their meaning or their spelling, but their pronunciation. Now that it is all over, any one seeking this writer can find her curled up inside a dictionary studying phonetics.

The game is called "Pronunciation" and is played on the principle of "Authors" except that instead of asking your opponent for a certain book by a certain author you ask for a word or two. To receive the card, you have to pronounce the word correctly. If your opponent can read, he knows how it should be pronounced, for his card contains the correct phonetic pronunciation. You either know at the beginning, you guess, you pronounce it as you have always pronounced it, or you get flustered.

This glib tongue first tripped on the word heinous. It is not hi'-nus. It is hay'-nus. Next was aspirant. Not ass'-pirant, but as-pire'ant. Then discourse. Not dis'-korse. Diskors'. Then autopsy. Not aw-top'-si. Aw'-top-si. Then rapine. Not rape'-een. Rap'-in. Then on and on.

The game contained 104 words. B. B. Bellows, the inventor, says he tried to select the 104 words most commonly mispronounced. He had quite a time making his selection. At one period he included caries [pronounced ca'-ri-es with a short a], but decided not enough people knew what it meant, so he substituted rabies, which has the same three syllables with accent on the first, except that the a is long. At first he had quintuplet [kwin'-tu-plet] in the list, then decided the public was tired of the Dionnes, and took it out. Just as he had done that, the new set was born in South America, so he reinserted it.

Mr. Bellows [bell'-ohs] says he has been thinking about the game for 25 years. He started collecting troublesome words during the last war when he was an infantry captain in France. "I've always had a yen for words but no education," he explained. "I got thrown out of Michigan and Oberlin, but not," quickly, "for mispronunciation. Just general lack of talent. However, I've always had friends who were well educated even if I wasn't myself." Inventing a pronunciation game, tho, has given him some horrible moments, for every one expects his pronunciation of every word [not just his 104] to be perfect. Recently he called on the editor of Esquire. They chatted along and along, and finally the editor said, "Now, look here, if you expect to convince me this game is good, you'd better pronounce our name right. You've been saying Es'-kwire. It is Es-kwire'."

Occasionally Mr. Bellows' backers go a bit afield in their efforts to praise his game. Grove Patterson of the Toledo Blade wrote a lyrical column about this new boon to understanding. Wrote Mr. Patterson: "It never occurred to me that when I put the accent on the second syllable in com-bat, I should have merely said kumbut." Mr. Bellows was a trifle embarrassed about this [combat is one of the 104 words], for combat is not pronounced kum'-but. It is pronounced kom'-bat.

The whole game is upsetting to one's superiority, as enlightenment so often is. Ordinarily is or'-di-ner-i-li. Clandestine is klan-dest'-in. Chastisement is chas'-tiz-ment. Contemplative is con-tem'-pla-tive. Acclimate is a-kli'-mit [radio announcers please copy this, and all]. Lamentable, which Mr. Bellows considers the most awkward word in the language, is lam'-en-ta-b'l. Conversant is con'-ver-sant. Contrary is kon'-trer-i. Incognito is in-kog'-ni-to. Indisputable is in-dis'-pu-ta-b'l. Cerebral, no matter what your surgeon calls it, is ser'-e-bral [short e in front]. And dictator is not dick'-tater, but dik-ta'-ter [means the same, tho].

We'd be glad to go thru the whole 104 words, but these are all this weary tongue has mastered today. Now to shuffle the pack of cards again.

THEY FOUGHT TO SAVE THEMSELVES

Chicago, March 26.—Lord Halifax, in his repetition of the argument that the nations of the western hemisphere, including the United States, owe a debt to the British for defense of their own country, is doing a very great disservice to his own people and to the cause of allied harmony now so much needed in a war-torn world.

If in fighting so heroically for their own country the British spent blood and treasure beyond the need for the preservation of the British empire and for the benefit of the Americas, it seems fair that they should be recompensed. No such expenditures were made and no such obligation exists. The British were doing just what Russia did, for national preservation. During the last World war and thereafter, we heard the same thesis to bring our country into the war on the side of the British empire and as a justification for failure to pay loans which came from the hard earned earnings of the American people.

Churchill's brave words, "Send us the tools and we will win the war," still ring in our ears, but we all know that after our furnishing tools costing billions of dollars of American taxpayers' money, the British could not win the war nor save their empire with the tools we so lavishly furnished; that saving of the British empire required millions of American soldiers and sailors and many billions of dollars as well as "blood, sweat, and tears" from the whole American people and from Canada and other nations of the western hemisphere.

Lord Halifax's words sound like a preliminary build-up for continued loans with the alternative of being called "Uncle Shylock" if we should find it necessary to tighten our purse strings.

We wish the British people well and want to coöperate realistically to make the world a better place to live in for all mankind, but the British are making such coöperation more difficult by continuing the attitude of a petulant pensioner claiming the right to continued payments for imaginary past services. We hope for better things from our British friends. CARL V. WISNER.

THE ISLANDS HE HELPED WIN

St. Johns, Mich., March 23.—In reply to the letter in this column today by Mrs. E. W. W., I will not try to argue with her apparent dislike for Mr. Roosevelt. I have spent some time under bombardment, as she suggests Mr. Roosevelt should. I do not say that we should not keep as territorial possessions the islands we are taking in this war. But it seems to me that those who think that in order to be repaid for our expended blood we must keep all of them are blinded to the principles for which we claim to be fighting. If any of us are inclined to be satisfied with territorial gains we shall sacrifice the greatest opportunity we have ever had to establish durable peace. Please, let's keep the whole picture in mind. W. R. CATTON JR.

THEIR SON'S IN THE PACIFIC

Jacksonville, Ill., March 25.—Permit me to express my appreciation for the editorial "Our Stakes in Asia Are Young Americans," in The Tribune of March 25. We have a son with the 40th division who has been in the Pacific more than two years. JOSEPH A. DODDS.

WANTS TO SEE HER SON

Harvey, Ill., March 22.—Will The Tribune use its influence in bringing our boys home from Europe before they are sent against the Japs? Some of those men in congress seem to have the idea the boys may forget to be soldiers if they are first sent home. Then, too, unselfish men like Sen. Chandler from Kentucky feel it would be too hard on the emotions of the families. Well, let me say I am willing to decide that for myself. Maybe they don't want the boys to see what is going on back here in the States.

I had a nephew who was called into service in October, 1941. He never set foot in his home again. He was wounded on a Pacific island. After he recovered, he was sent back to his outfit and was killed on Saipan in June, 1944. Would it have been too hard on this boy's emotions or those of his folks at home if he had been given a furlough?

Our one and only son is in Germany at present and if the commander in chief does not see fit to send our boys home first, he is likely to find me parked on his White House steps until he gets our boy back to us. Aren't Russia, Canada, England, and the other allies willing to carry their load in fighting the Japs?

MRS. R. A. WALBERG.

MALE NURSE TRAINING

Oshkosh, Wis., March 13.—Since my son Harold has been home with an honorable discharge from the army, he has worked 1½ years as an orderly in our local hospital and loves the work so much he wishes to go in training and get a degree as a male nurse. He has written to different hospitals to gain entrance, but they tell him they are not permitted to train boys. It seems they must have special permission from other sources. Now, with the thousands of ill, crippled, maimed men who are pouring home from the different theaters of war, why don't the government or private hospitals snatch a chance to train as many male nurses as they are lucky enough to get.

MRS. NELL BELONGER.

CHARGES POSTAL BLUNDER

Chicago, March 13.—Today I received a letter dated Sept. 18, one of our letters sent air mail to our soldier son, and returned by the New York postmaster stamped "no record." Our son has received mail under the same APO before and since the above date and it has taken about six months to return a letter that never left the United States. L. B. R.

LANDLORD JUSTIFIED

Chicago, March 27.—I work nights and come home at midnight. I live next to an alley, which is dark, and there was no light on the porch so [1] I had one placed there. It cost $5 and I gave the landlord the bill. 2. He said that when I move I should have the light taken out. 3. Will I be able to do so? E. P.

1. You had no right to do this at the landlord's expense.

2. We assume that you mean that he refused to pay for it. Such refusal was within his rights.

3. If he says that you can remove it, we see no reason for you to question his statement. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

JOB DRAFT BILL CALLED PLOT TO CONTROL PEOPLE

Taft Charges It's Move to Planned Economy

BY PHILIP DODD
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., March 29—The New Deal administration wants war job controls approved by congress as part of its post-war program for a planned economy, Sen. Taft [R., O.] charged today during senate debate on the house approved "work or jail" bill.

"I can't help but think," Taft told the senate, "that the administration men who want this bill are more interested in channeling employment than in war production. They think they need the power to tell people where to work or where not to work as part of their post-war planned economy."

The bill, a compromise between house and senate versions of man power measures, would give War Mobilizer Byrnes the power to fix employment ceilings in any industry, issue regulations controling the hiring and rehiring of workers, freeze employes of essential industries in their jobs, and to set up appeals machinery.

Roosevelt Takes a Hand

"This bill," Taft declared, "would enable Mr. Byrnes to write the law, enforce the law, and to a large extent punish those who violate it. It would enable him to draft regulations, having the force of law, which would amount to total national service legislation."

While the senate was debating the bill, Majority Leader Barkley [D., Ky.] and Chairman Thomas [D., Utah] of the senate military affairs committee, were called to the White House to discuss the measure's fate with the President. Mr. Roosevelt yesterday in a letter to Thomas urged immediate passage of the bill.

"We told the President we have a real fight on our hands," Barkley told reporters. At a press conference Barkley said the vote on the measure would be close, but that the bill's supporters had "a chance to win."

Thomas Pessimistic

Thomas, however, did not share Barkley's expressed confidence. He told reporters the vote would be "very close, with a tendency toward defeat" of the bill.

"Did the President hear anything from you or Sen. Barkley that would give him any encouragement?" Thomas was asked.

"No," replied Thomas.

After two days of debate on the bill, senate leaders predicted there would be no vote before Monday or Tuesday. Barkley estimated that between 30 and 35 senators were out of town, some on official business and others at home for Easter. Thomas said the informal agreement to postpone a vote was more a courtesy to absent senators than a desire on either side to wait until additional votes could be lined up.

Unnecessary, O'Mahoney Says

Sen. O'Mahoney [D., Wyo.], who charged yesterday the bill was a totalitarian measure, took the floor again to open today's debate. He pointed to the code of principles for post-war coöperation of labor and management, jointly announced yesterday by the CIO, AFL, and United States Chamber of Commerce, as proof that the "work or jail" bill is not needed.

"This agreement," O'Mahoney said, "is the best possible evidence that there is no need for a man power control bill. It demonstrates that democracy can function in the midst of war."

Sen. Saltonstall [R., Mass.], whose voting record in the senate has leaned toward the administration, said he did not agree with O'Mahoney's interpretation. "I feel that when our military leaders say a bill like this is needed for war production we should give it to them," Saltonstall said.

O'Mahoney continued his speech with the assertion that the "work or jail" bill was undemocratic in that it centered the authority for controling the activities of war workers in Washington. The draft law, he said, leaves the administration to local boards in every community.

"Loafer No Asset"

"The man who has migrated to accept a war job is still registered with his home town draft board for military service," O'Mahoney said, "but when it comes to directing him in his civilian activities this bill would put him under regulations and directives—no one can tell in what form—issued in Washington by the war mobilizer."

"Willing workers beget efficiency," Kilgore said, "but unwilling workers produce nothing and hamper the work of others. The loafer is no asset to the country, so why legislate him onto the war production pay roll?"

The labor freeze authorized in the bill might deprive war industry of part time help, Sen. Aiken [R., Vt.] told the senate. People like school teachers, devoting their vacations to war work, could be frozen in such jobs, he said.

Sen. McKellar [D., Tenn.], dean of the senate, said he was against the bill because he believed it unconstitutional. Forcing a man to stay on a job constitutes involuntary servitude, forbidden in the 13th [anti-slavery] amendment to the Constitution, he said.

REPORT 50% CUT IN SMALL ARMS OUTPUT IS NEAR

Washington, D. C., March 29 [Special]—Substantial cutbacks in the output of small arms ammunition, sharply constricting a program doubled only four months ago, are expected by officials of the war production board to be ordered within the next two weeks.

One of the reductions is understood to slash from $225,000,000 to $133,000,000 the program of .50 caliber ammuntion for the rest of this year. One spokesman even suggested the WPB is tacitly preparing its various offices for an overall reduction of as much as 50 per cent.

Described as "sizable," however, even where their exact extent is not intimated, the cutbacks are expected to be placed before the WPB by the army by next week-end, it was learned. The time and the place of the cutbacks, it was said, will depend to a large degree on a cutback pattern worked out between the army and the WPB production readjustment committee.

There appeared to be no suggestion that the reductions in the ammunition programs would materially change the over-all war production effort, or release any substantial quantities of man power, materials, or facilities for civilian output. Brass and copper, basic materials for small arms ammuntion, will remain in critical supply, altho the volume no longer needed for ammunition would be directed to other war needs, it was said.

HUDSON BAY CO. GRANT OF 1670 TO BE PROBED

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WINNIPEG, Man., March 29—Legality of the charter granted by King Charles II, to the Hudson Bay company in May, 1670, by which the company was given trading rights in British North America will be examined by a special session of the Saskatchewan legislature to be called shortly.

The legislators also will inquire into the validity of the granting of large tracts of land to the company in 1870 under the British North American act. At that time the company relinquished certain of its rights.

The Socialist government of the province wants the lands reverted to the crown, C. Phelps, minister of natural resources, said. The company already has turned some lands over to the government this year. These have been set aside as a muskrat and beaver preserve for the benefit of trappers. The government also is in the fur business.

INQUIRES INTO SUBSIDIES PAID PRESS BY INDIA

LONDON, March 29 (AP)—Reginald Sorensen, Laborite, in commons today asked L. S. Amery, secretary for India, to "state the amounts paid to Reuters and the Associated Press by the central government and provincial governments [of India], either as subsidies, fees, or subscriptions."

Amery replied that he was "making inquiries of the government of India" and would inform Sorensen of the reply.

Sorensen also asked whether there had been any increase in any such amounts during the past six years "and what amounts are paid to any other agency of similar character and whether there is any Indian representative of Reuters."

Reuters made no comment immediately, saying it was felt that Amery's reply, when made, would take care of the question.

NO FEES PAID AP

In New York, Lloyd Stratton, president of the Associated Press, Ltd., said:

"The Associated Press does not receive subsidies, fees, or subscriptions to or for any of its services from the central or provincial or any other part of the Indian government. In fact, the Associated Press is not aware that any part of the Indian government would be interested in the availability of the Associated Press services.

"Associated Press services in India are supplied by direct negotiations with newspapers and radio stations desiring to subscribe and they remit the regular charge therefor direct to the Associated Press."

Soldier Baptized in Rhine 3 Days Before Big Drive

WITH THE U. S. 9TH ARMY, March 29 (AP)—Three days before the 9th army jumped off in its Ruhr offensive, a Protestant chaplain baptized a combat engineer in the Rhine river. Before going into action, Pfc. Howard K. Sligar of Centralia, Ill., asked his chaplain to baptize him in some "running stream." Chaplain Chester W. Egbert of Mount Pleasant, Mich., had to do some personal reconnaissance under enemy observation but Sligar got his wish.

GRADES AIRSTRIP ON IWO WHILE BULLETS FLY

IWO ISLAND [Delayed]—Two marine engineers, one a Chicagoan, sank the first surfacing blade into Motoyama air field No. 1 while the strip was still raked by Japanese fire.

Pvt. John D. Rosenbrock, 1913 N. Hudson av., Chicago, and Sgt. Frank D. Rea, Pine Island, Minn., moved onto the strip so early that enemy dead were pushed before the blade of their power grader, and shells and snipers' bullets were a constant threat. A strip suitable for landing artillery spotter planes was prepared and ready for use in seven hours, a full day before planes could actually land because of enemy fire.

GOVERNOR URGES STATES TO MAP FLYING FUTURE

Wants Capable Business Men in Aviation

Warning to listen to capable business men in planning for post-war aviation was given last night by Gov. Green in an address delivered in the Chicago Bar association headquarters at a dinner sponsored by the aviation and insurance laws committees of the Chicago and Illinois bar associations.

"There is too much loose talk on this subject—some of it by men who should know better," Gov. Green said. "In our proper enthusiasm to provide the fullest opportunities for the development of post-war aviation, unless we get to the facts and stick to the facts we may spend a lot of money foolishly, and saddle many communities with airport and other projects that can never be self-supporting."

6,305 Airports Planned

The national airport plan developed by the civil aeronautics administration, Gov. Green explained, calls for 6,305 airports at 5,269 locations in the United States, providing airports for each of the 3,464 communities of 2,500 population or more and 1,805 airports for the 13,288 communities of less than 2,500.

Gov. Green, as chairman of the aviation committee of the Council of State Governments, submitted a close study of post-war aviation to the council's executive committee which, in turn, transmitted the study to the aviation subcommittee of the senate commerce committee, now considering bills for federal aid in the national airport program.

The study, Gov. Green said, "pointed out that the federal program has been prepared after too little consultation with the authorities in the several states.

New Plan by States Urged

"We have suggested that a new plan be drawn up with full consultation with the states, and the states have pledged themselves to undertake, in joint effort with the CAA, the preparation of sound and comprehensive airport programs for their own states.

Pointing to Chicago's place in post-war aviation, Gov. Green said that "in the very immediate future middle westerners should be able to board planes in Chicago for direct flights to Paris or London or South America or Asia. It is imperative that we locally provide the facilities for planes in such service and that the national government prepare the way for American lines to provide such service out of Chicago."

"In this connection," Gov. Green added, "I hope that most of you read the fine article by Frank Sturdy, and studied the splendid map which accompanied it in last Sunday's edition of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE."

Mass Production Doubted

Two other speakers, William A. Patterson, president of United Airlines, and Maj. Reed M. Chambers, president of United States Aviation Underwriters, scoffed at dreams of mass production of planes for private use in the post-war era, but conceded that war had advanced acceptance of the use of airplanes by 20 years.

Patterson said that statistics proved travel increased with income. "Even so," he said, "the aviation industry must depend on the man with an income of $5,000 or more."

The speaker opposed a government subsidy and said that he didn't think the 60 cents per pound paid to the air industry for mail was a subsidy when the government received $2.40 per pound for the same mail.

SURGEONS' GROUP LEADER DEFENDS VETS' HOSPITALS

Dr. M. T. MacEachern, associate director of the American College of Surgeons, yesterday praised the high quality of medical care being given to former soldiers and sailors by the United States veterans' administration and asserted the hospitals operated by the administration are institutions "of which every American should feel proud."

He said he did not wish to become involved in the feud between the veterans' administration and the American Medical association, whose official Journal charged Wednesday that the administration is giving former fighting men a substandard type of medical attention.

Dr. MacEachern said the college of surgeons has had the veterans' hospitals on its approved list since 1925 and that the American College of Physicians had given similar approval to them. Arthur E. Canty, Illinois commander of the American Legion, declared the A. M. A. charges "unfounded in the light of experience with the veterans' administration over the years."

They included: Anthony J. Montalbano, seaman first class, son of Mrs. Marie Montalbano, 1929 Burling st.; Joseph A. Colossus comes to market

A HARD, cold—and not unwelcome—fact that business men are rapidly coming to appreciate is that one of their best post-war prospects is the American farmer.

Figures are sometimes dull. But here are figures that inspire . . . for they are figures that can mean the continuance of prosperity in America after the war.

Farm income in 1944 is estimated at 27.9 billion dollars, an all-time record for any occupational group. Farmers' savings are now over 10½ billions, and to that sum add the value of farmers' War Bonds, life insurance, and liquid securities!

How have farmers accumulated such savings? Well, for one thing, the goods farmers have needed during the past few years have, in large part, been unavailable. In the post-war period farmers will unleash these billions to satisfy their pent-up needs.

Yes, today's farmer is America's best guarantee of post-war economic security. Farmers face no reconversion; the world must eat without interruption. And farmers have been guaranteed at least 90% of parity for two years after the cessation of hostilities. A continuing high farm income is assured. Farmers will spend heavily out of both savings and earnings—because their present need of practically everything America sells is colossal.

What business can ignore the farmer's strength?

Boston to Show Art Collection of Chicagoan

BY JUDITH CASS

MISS ELIZABETH DAY MCCORMICK will depart a week from Sunday for Boston and a round of parties that would impress the most sophisticated debutante had they been planned for a bud of the season instead of for the world traveler and collector that Miss McCormick is. The occasion for Miss McCormick's trip will be the opening Tuesday, April 10, of an exhibit of her collection of embroideries, silks, textiles, needlework, and costumes in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

The collection has occupied Miss McCormick for many years, up to the outbreak of the present war, and its assembling has taken her to many countries. The exhibit will be opened with a preview the afternoon of the 10th, and a reception that night. Miss McCormick will stay with Miss Rose Nichols, whose Bullfinch designed nome is a Boston landmark and who will welcome her with a tea the afternoon of her arrival.

Miss McCormick's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hall McCormick, will go east with her, and among the other entertainments planned for Miss McCormick which they will attend are a dinner which Edward Jackson Holmes, the museum's president, and Mrs. Holmes will give and one at which George H. Edgell, the museum's director, will be host.

Miss Martha Townsend, curator of the museum's textile department, has been in Chicago to choose from many packing cases and storerooms the items to be included in the exhibit. Costumes from medieval Europe and Asia, oriental costumes of the 17th century, and personal effects of the French Kings Louis and of the Italian Medicis are among the treasures Miss McCormick has obtained over the years and which she had thought might go to the Art institute here. Members of the Needlework and Textile Guild of the institute have viewed parts of the collection.

Service Notes

From Iwo Jima comes the news that Lt. G. Greeley Wells received only a slight wound from a sniper's bullet during his participation in that recent battle and was able to rejoin his marine corps unit almost immediately. Mrs. Wells and their son, George Jr., are living in Laguna Beach, Cal., while Lt. Wells is overseas. Also in California is Mrs. Wells' younger brother, Douglas Blossom, who is stationed at the navy auxiliary air station in Twentynine Palms.

In a hospital in England Capt. John W. Metcalfe is recovering from shrapnel wounds and a compound fracture of the right arm, injuries which he received in Germany and which added a third cluster to the Purple Heart ribbon he wears. During his absence his wife, the former Marjorie Truesdale, is staying with her parents, the William D. Truesdales, in Winnetka.

Tho he will not be here for Easter, Lt. John S. Broeksmit Jr. of the navy was able to experience a little of our spring weather, when he was home in Lake Forest last week on leave. He left Sunday to return to sea duty.

The Julian Armstrongs soon will have two new overseas addresses to remember. Their son, Andrew, is serving as an army lieutenant in France, and another son, Capt. Julian Armstrong, will leave shortly for duty overseas with the army air forces. Mrs. Andrew Armstrong and their baby daughter, Theresa Royce, are living at Fort Smith, Ark., where Lt. Armstrong was stationed before leaving for overseas.

Symphony Plays Holy Week Bach and Strauss in Lange's Farewell of Waning Season

This year the Holy week concerts happened to coincide with Hans Lange's farewell until another Chicago Symphony orchestra season, and there was unmistakable significance in his choice of music. It was Bach and Strauss, and it began with Frederick Stock's transcription of "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God," which opened Stock's last concerts, and ended with "Ein Heldenleben," which Stock loved and which because of him became one of our orchestra's masterpieces. No attention was called to this at all. It was a memorial concert if you recognized it, and cared to observe it.

Perhaps the finest recognition came from the orchestra itself. I had never thought the chorale prelude on the famous hymn represented Stock at his best as a transcriber, but it does represent qualities his orchestra always had, of the solid, cumulative line, the richness of brass, and the sense of dramatic impact. Just playing it last night seemed to put the players in the groove of good performance. Otherwise, nothing as lovely could have happened as its sensitive, compassionate playing of the gentle introduction that is the Sinfonia, "Ich Steh mit Einem Fuss im Grabe." When it had ended, the audience was too bemused to do much applauding, and with music like that, there is no higher praise.

For the three chorales from the Passion According to Saint Matthew, Mr. Lange had the assistance of the University of Chicago choir, a group well trained by Gerhard Schroth, but without the beauty of tone or experience with orchestra to project the full splendor of the score. The choir was at its best in the a cappella performance of "When I Too Am Departing," and the orchestra won its major laurels in the majestic "In Deepest Grief Here Sit We Weeping."

Then, after intermission, came the Strauss, a kind of test piece since it was so long one of Stock's great successes, and since Lange had a major triumph with it last spring. Last night's performance had its glories, but they were not unqualified. The huge score sagged in the middle because, alas, our orchestra has sagged a bit itself. The lovely interlude of the hero's companion was superbly played by John Weicher, whose violin had the sustained beauty to mesmerize the ear, and that beauty recurred at the end of the performance, when Mr. Lange poured a great crescendo of tone for a memorable period. But the winds were rarely up to the old standard, tho the brass made up in "Traum durch die Dämmerung" for what it lost on the batlefield. Yet the flaws were outnumbered by the glories of the performance, and the glories reminded us that our orchestra is truly a treasure, which it is up to us to cherish.

Concert by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, Hans Lange, conductor; assisted by the University of Chicago chorus, Gerhard Schroth, director. Presented at Orchestra hall, Thursday evening, March 29, 1945, and scheduled for repetition Friday afternoon. The program:

Chorale Prelude, "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God".....Bach
[Freely transcribed for orchestra by Frederick Stock.]
Sinfonia to Church Cantata, "I stand with a foot in the grave".....Bach
Three Chorale Preludes from the Passion According to Saint Matthew.....Bach
O Man Bewail Thy Sin So Great
When I Too Am Departing
In Deepest Grief Here Sit We Weeping.
Tone Poem, "Ein Heldenleben"....Strauss

Shoppers' Last Mad Rush Sets Buying Records

BY REA SEEGER

All Easter shopping records have been broken this last week. What with fine weather and the extremely early date, shoppers have taken over the shops and stores and virtually cleaned out everything in sight. Never have the hat collections gone out so swiftly.

Be-flowered creations are still the most popular, with the piled high arrangements adding color as well as extra inches. The high school crowd has upset all tradition by buying real, honest-to-goodness hats, the career girls have gone delightfully feminine with the most feminine of hats available, and the mature women have gone completely Easter with veils, flowers, satin ribbon, and pastel tinted straws. The parade will be a gay one.

Popular coats are led by the short models, some only waist length, straight and prim like a little boy's jacket, and others cut in lengths that clear the knees. Fitted coats, reminiscent of the former reefers, look new and fresh because of the slim fitted silhouette and the brief shoulder capes. Navy blue, gray, and black in that order will lead the color parade according to the fashion checkers around the town.

By far the most colorful, however, are the pastel tinted suits, lime, yellow, pink, blue, aqua, and very light beige. These come in tailored and semi-tailored and costume models. Ready for contrast are the pastel colored coats and huge bold checked wool coats and jackets.

The fashion world has gone pastel, without looking infantile. Never have such lush shades been so universally popular. Even the smart new accessories to complete the spring costumes have the same garden fresh color appeal.

Jewish Board Names Schwartz to Head Building Fund Drive

The board of Jewish education has named Charles K. Schwartz, Chicago attorney and a director of Sinai temple, chairman of its 1945 campaign for funds with which to purchase the Chicago Woman's club building at 72 E. 11th st. Quota for the drive has been set at $550,000. The building is expected to house the administrative offices of the board, the College of Jewish Studies, a center for Jewish youth activities, and a library of more than 25,000 volumes.

Mr. Schwartz has announced that he will organize an advance gifts committee, a women's division, and a trades and professions division. The campaign is expected to open in April and close in June.

Offer of the board to purchase the building recently was presented to the Chicago Woman's club by Judge Harry M. Fisher. The board's administrative secretary, H. S. Greenwald, yesterday said that an agreement had been reached between the board and the club concerning the purchase, and that contracts will be signed next week.

(Other recipes, menus, and food suggestions and news will be found on page 17.)

1 large cake compressed yeast [1 oz.].
1½ cups scalded milk.
1 teaspoon salt.
½ cup shortening.
5 cups flour [sifted before measuring].
2 eggs.
Prune jam or cherry preserves.

Soften yeast in lukewarm water. Pour milk over sugar and salt and stir briskly until sugar is melted. Add 3 cups flour and mix in well the softened shortening. Add yeast mixture, then well beaten eggs. Mix well. Add remaining 2 cups flour. Beat dough with a wooden spoon or electric mixer until dough is smooth and elastic and does not stick to spoon. Sufficient beating is important for light biscuits. Flour top of dough lightly, cover, and let rise until doubled in bulk. Knead down. Working with half of dough, form into large roll. Cut into 1½ inch pieces and flatten with lightly floured palms. Place a spoonful of thick jam in center; pinch edges together, sealing in jam. Brush top and sides with melted fat and place in baking pan. Let rise until doubled, covered, then bake at 400 degrees about 20 minutes. If desired, second half of dough may be baked in form cake pan with addition of ½ cup raisins and ¼ cup chopped nuts.

White Collar GIRL

BY RUTH MAC KAY

In Our Hearts

There's Mary in the heart of each of us—
Her steadfastness that watched beside a tomb,
Her trust enduring, love undimmed by night,
By darkness, grief, or death or endless gloom.
There's something Mary-like in all our hearts
That watches, waits, and loves and quite alone
Keeps vigil over all we hold most dear—
With faith that Love can roll away a stone.

Selling Out

It was one of those days when peace rumors were spreading thru Chicago's loop. In the career shop of a State st. store an excited customer bought a coat and, with her mind not at all on the purchase, asked the salesgirl what she thought would become of Hitler. The girl was a bit excited, too—as she admitted when later shown the sales check she had written. Instead of "one coat" she had scribbled "one Hitler....$49.50."

Our Girls

I who one of those girls jumping rope behind the Board of Trade building and I want to ask: We youngsters haven't done so badly in the four years of war, have we? We've worked just as hard as any one else. We have worried over our brothers and sweethearts in the service, worked for the Red Cross, bought bonds, saved fat, and done a host of other things. We're young in years but old in mind and experience. One of our group has gone thru the torture of waiting after receiving a telegram informing her a brother was missing in action. Another was beaming with pride as she showed the distinguished flying cross and air medal of her sweetheart.

We jump rope for relaxation, during our lunch period. Whenever Ceres chances to look down upon us maybe she will smile and say, "Thank God for youth!"

Somepin' very pleasant happened to me the other day when I was looking for a hat . . . thought your WCG's who complain [sometimes] about the saleswomen might be interested. I began my hunt in a large department store but, after trying every hat in the color I wanted, decided not one struck my fancy. The same thing occurred in the second store, but at the third I was successful. I found just what I wanted. Sis was with me and she decided to go back to the first store to buy a hat she had seen; we found our former salesperson, and what do you think? She asked to see what I had bought, was enthusiastic, and complimented me on my taste! How's that for being a good sport—and in these times of help shortage!

Plea for Piano and Furniture Made by Sally

BY SALLY JOY BROWN

Calls for home furnishings are among the most numerous we get. A social worker is eager to obtain furniture and home furnishings for Mrs. C., whose husband was killed in an accident. For a limited time relatives grudgingly cared for her and her two small children, until she was encouraged to find a place of her own. Her small income is being supplemented by the assisting agency, but there are no extra resources to provide living room furniture, a complete bed, two chests of drawers, kitchen chairs, toweling, and linens, which are the most essential needs at present. Transportation of south side offers can be arranged most economically.

We hope some one will be able to fill this north sider's plea:

"Dear Miss Brown: Would you please ask your readers if any one would be willing to give up an old piano? I have wanted to write to you about this for a long time, but have lacked the courage, until now, to ask for what I have desired for my children. I was widowed several years ago and have done what I could to provide a home for my family, but it has been a home without music. Altho we always have wanted an instrument, there have been too many places for our small income. I can play the piano, and music would bring joy to us."

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 diamond	Pass	1 heart	Pass
1 no trump	Pass	3 no trump	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Seven of spades.

The obvious truth that two chances are better than one was never more clearly illustrated than in the hand shown today. South was the declarer at the very normal contract of three no trump and West led the seven of spades. East played the king and South played low. The jack was continued and the ace won. Declarer was now faced with the choice of attacking the diamonds or the hearts. Hoping that West had led from a six card suit and that East had no more spades, he elected to finesse the heart, and when it lost, the contract was down one trick.

Another player decided to go for the diamonds, and, having eight of the suit, elected to finesse the jack, which under normal circumstances is the proper play. When this lost to the queen, West cashed the setting trick in spades. Both players felt that they had been victims of unfortunate guesses. Actually, their guesswork was very bad, because each put all his eggs in one basket. Let us concentrate for one moment on the diamond suit itself. With five cards missing, normally the better play is to finesse the jack rather than play out the ace and king. There is a slight mathematical advantage in favor of the finesse, but remember the advantage is only slight.

The heart finesse was an exactly 50 per cent chance. If, however, you could combine the two, you would have by far the better proposition. Therefore South should have played the ace and king of diamonds first, giving up the chance of the finesse and if the queen fails to drop, the 50 per cent chance of the heart finesse is still available.

In other words, the declarer had two chances, first, to drop the queen of diamonds, and secondly, the heart finesse. Two chances are obviously better than one.

MOTHER, OUR TEACHER SAYS HOME SANITATION IS IMPORTANT TO HEALTH PROTECTION!
SHE'S RIGHT, JANE... THAT'S WHY I USE CLOROX REGULARLY IN MY CLEANING!

MODERN scientific housekeeping methods go beyond ordinary cleansing for greater sanitation. In millions of homes Clorox cleansing provides an added protection against infectious germs commonly found in home "danger zones." The regular use of Clorox, always an important sanitary measure, is even more important today due to the growing shortage of civilian doctors and nurses. Clorox provides the type of disinfection recommended by health authorities. It is not only an efficient germicide, it deodorizes, removes stains, too.

Bathrooms! Germs can easily thrive in bathrooms. That's why it's such a good idea to make bathrooms sanitary by using Clorox in routine cleansing of washbasins, bathtubs, toilet bowls; tile, enamel, linoleum and wood surfaces. Simply follow directions on label.

Laundry! Clorox gently bleaches white cottons and linens snowy-white (brightens fast colors), removes stains, scorch, mildew... makes laundry fresh, sanitary. Clorox also reduces the need for long vigorous rubbing; it helps prolong the life of hard-to-replace cottons and linens.

If the Easter bunny would bring a steak or a roast or a whole ham this year, he'd be a pretty welcome little morning caller! But, the meat dish, backbone of the Easter dinner, probably will turn out to be very simple, with anything as luxurious as an upside down meat loaf or a ham slice baked in fruit juice considered a real treat.

To offset the absence of the Easter ham or spring chicken, give the menu a lift by preparing every dish with the tenderest care. Cook the vegetables to perfection and serve them with herbal "butter" or a taste-flattering sauce. Take infinite pains in preparing the ingredients and dressing for the tossed fruit or vegetable salad. Include an interesting hot bread in the menu—perhaps a sweet yeast roll or novel biscuit or muffin.

Above all, top off the whole scheme with a dessert which breathes spring as do the flowers on your gay new hat. These fruity and fluffy desserts will round out the Easter menu without making serious inroads into the backlog of sugar.

Breath o' Spring Pie
1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin
¼ cup cold water
3 eggs, separated
3 tablespoons honey
⅓ cup lemon juice
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
¼ cup sugar
Jam or preserves
12 graham crackers

Soak gelatin in cold water for 5 minutes. Beat egg yolks slightly, stir in honey, lemon juice, and salt. Cook over hot water, stirring constantly, until mixture coats a spoon. Add gelatin and stir until dissolved. Cool until thick and sirupy. Add lemon rind. Make a meringue of egg whites and sugar and fold into thickened gelatin mixture. Line a 9 inch pie plate with graham crackers cut to fit plate. Fill in opening between crackers with cracker crumbs. Pour filling into crust and chill. To serve, spread jam or preserves lightly over the top.

Rhubarb Raisin Pudding
1 cup sifted flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar
2 tablespoons shortening
⅓ to ½ cup milk
1 tablespoon melted margarine
½ cup raisins

Sift together flour, baking powder, salt, and sugar. Cut in shortening. Add milk to make soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead gently ½ minute. Roll out into rectangular sheet about 8 inches wide and ¼ inch thick. Brush with melted margarine and cover with raisins. Roll up jelly roll style and cut into 2 inch slices. Place cut side down in greased muffin pans and bake at 425 degrees 15 to 20 minutes. Serve with rhubarb sauce. Rhubarb sauce: Cook 1½ cups cut rhubarb with ¼ cup water until rhubarb is soft, about 7 minutes. Add ½ cup sugar [or enough to sweeten] and bring to a boil].

Prune Refrigerator Cake
[Serves eight.]
2 eggs, separated
1 can sweetened condensed milk
⅓ cup lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ cups chopped cooked prunes
18 graham crackers

Beat egg yolks until light. Stir in condensed milk, lemon rind, lemon juice, and salt. Fold in prunes and stiffly beaten egg whites. Line an 8 inch square pan with waxed paper. Spread a thin layer of fruit mixture on bottom, then arrange six graham crackers on this. Repeat until crackers are used, ending with layer of fruit mixture. Chill overnight.

Shrimps at Best—French Fried

Dressed in a golden brown coating, fresh shrimps are at their crispy best. Altho various coverings may be used in preparing french fried shrimps, a batter coating gets the greatest number of votes. Here's the recipe for a batter to coat two pounds of shrimps:

Sift together ½ cup flour, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, and ½ teaspoon baking powder. Beat 1 egg slightly and to it add ½ cup milk. Add to dry ingredients and beat mixture until smooth. Dip cooked shrimps one at a time into batter and turn until well coated. Heat deep fat to 375 degrees [temperature at which a one inch cube of bread browns in 60 seconds], and fry shrimps in it for 2 to 3 minutes, or until golden brown. [To cut batter in half, use egg yolk only.]

All Babies' Leather Shoes Take Ration Stamps After May 1

All babies' leather shoes will require ration stamps after May 1, the office of price administration announced yesterday in Washington, D. C. This action will put the sizes 0 to 4, generally worn by babies before they learn to walk, on the ration lists.

OPA said the demand for smaller sizes had soared "out of proportion to actual needs," but it was suggested here yesterday by stores handling infants' shoes that four years of rising birth rates might have something to do with the shortage. Only infants' leather shoes are affected.

The office of civilian requirements also disclosed in Washington yesterday that it is seeking production of 150 million pairs of good fabric shoes to eke out leather footwear supplies for adults. The fabric shoes, with synthetic rubber soles, would restore the two pairs a year standard dropped in December by OPA, William Y. Elliott, OCR director, said.

Make Hot Cross Buns for Easter Breakfast; Here Is a Good Recipe

One-a-penny, two-a-penny, hot cross buns! Make them for Easter breakfast by this good recipe: Pour 1 cup scalded milk over ¼ cup sugar, 2 tablespoons shortening, and 1 teaspoon salt; cool to lukewarm. Soften 1 cake yeast in ¼ cup lukewarm water and add to milk mixture. Add 1 beaten egg and 3½ cups flour sifted with ¾ teaspoon cinnamon. Beat until smooth. Work in ¼ cup washed currants or raisins. Cover and let rise in warm place until double in bulk. Shape into fat buns and place on greased pans an inch apart. Cover with clean cloth and let rise until light, about an hour. Cut a cross on top of each bun with sharp knife. Brush with beaten egg diluted with 2 tablespoons water. Bake at 425 degrees 20 minutes. While hot, fill crosses with plain frosting.

Point Values Shift on Some Canned Foods

Point values on No. 2 cans of peas and asparagus will be increased 10 points to 30 and 20 points, respectively, and tomato juice and some fruits will drop in point value Sunday for April, the office of price administration announced yesterday. Point values on pork, pork products, cheese, and cooking oils will be increased at the same time.

Sweet cherries will go down 20 points to 40 for the No. 2½ can and plums and prunes will drop 10 to 20 points, Marion W. Isbell, area director, said. No. 2 cans of tomato juice will be cut 10 points to 10 and the 46 ounce can will go down to 20 points, a 50 per cent cut.

Isbell said peas and asparagus are moving to consumers at a rate which would exhaust supplies within two months, but that the movement of cherries, plums, prunes, and tomato juice is behind schedule.

The Boston store, State and Madison sts., yesterday became the first loop department store to feel the effects of the attempt to clean up the food black market when the OPA asked the federal District court to suspend the store's food license.

Isbell said officials of the store ignored three warning letters and a formal license warning notice dated last Dec. 8, and had continued alleged overcharges of 5 cents a pound on pork loin and chops, 3 cents for hamburger and vegetable soup, 5 cents for sirup, and 11 cents a pound for top grade beef rib steaks.

Edward V. Warnshuis, vice president, said the Boston store officials had not been notified of the filing of the OPA suit and were not as yet in a position to make a statement.

Louis Ricker, manager of the meat and grocery department, said the OPA's charge was "ridiculous." He said he never had received any warning of violations from the OPA, and if the store had ever received any he would be the first to know about it. He said ceiling prices of all meats are posted on the counter and the store never has violated ceiling price regulations.

The OPA also petitioned for a permanent injunction against the 20 stores operated by Novak's Stock Yard Markets, Inc. Isbell said investigators had found price violations at 13 of the stores, ranging up to 24 cents a pound on utility grade porterhouse steak.

In a fourth group of consent judgments against food retailers, Judge Robert J. Dunne in Circuit court approved payment of $50 each and issued injunctions against eight stores, bringing the total of such actions to 51. The cases involved Louis Bailis, 1568 S. Kedzie av.; Mike Nitch, 1950 S. Kedzie av.; Charlie's meat market, 3334 W. 26th st.; Stanley Spisak, 2240 E. 73d st.; Anthony P. Rolla, 301 E. 116th st.; Hugo Fredburg, 2251 E. 73d st., and John Sakula, 3555 Milwaukee av.

The Vincent Formusa company, 710 Grand av., paid a consent judgment of $922 in the federal District court of Judge William H. Holly on charges of selling cheese at overceiling prices.

The OPA asked $4,000 and an injunction in a suit naming the Edith Cavell Candy company, 913 S. Western av., and $3,500 and an injunction against the Em-Jay Candy company, 212 Kinzie st. Above ceiling sales of whole milk powder and other dairy products were charged in a suit for undetermined triple damages and an injunction against the Golden State Sales corporation, 211 N La Salle st., a subsidiary of the Golden State company of San Francisco, Cal.

The OPA also charged S. Bloom, Inc., 916 S. Halsted st., with overcharging retailers on cigaret sales and asked an injunction. In Circuit court Judge Dunne entered a consent judgment for an injunction against James Karas, owner of the Town Club tavern, 3157 Commercial av., accused of overceiling prices of cigarets.

Fresh Fish Prices Drop and Supplies Grow, Says OPA

Fresh fish prices in Chicago retail stores have gone down in the last few days and supplies are more plentiful than a week ago, the office of price administration reported yesterday. Overlapping of the Easter and Jewish holidays, each of which creates a higher demand for fish, caused sharp increases in price, due to meager supplies from the lower lakes, Samuel S. Lane, OPA fish price expert, said. Retailers and wholesalers last week agreed to keep prices as low as possible and increased supplies in the last few days sent prices down as much as 10 cents a pound, he said.

Meat and Potato Hash May Be Oven Browned

Meat and potato hash need not always be fried. It may be oven browned to make a more digestible product. Thin left-over or freshly mashed potatoes slightly with milk; combine with ground or chopped cooked meat, grated onion, and seasonings. Whip thoroly, pile into greased custard cups or casserole, and bake until puffy and brown.

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., March 29—Nunnally Johnson hopes to have John Archer in his next picture, which probably will be "Home Is the Sailor." . . . Virginia Gilmore is returning to work for Sam Goldwyn in a couple of months. . . . Col. Bill Keighley, now out of uniform and back in Hollywood, will announce his plans any day. I have a hunch 20th Century-Fox will win him. He and the little lady bought a lovely place in Beverly Hills. . . . Greer Garson tells it herself. She calls herself "Metro's golden mare." . . . Jack Chertok, producer of "The Corn Is Green," asked for tickets to the preview. He was turned down. After much pressure, he got in.

Somewhat on the Quiet Side.

Gene Kelly will be the star of the navy show which Moss Hart is writing and being very quiet about. . . . Billy Williams plays opposite Susan Hayward in "Deadline at Dawn." . . . The Andrews Sisters are lucky. They have the Robert Mitchell boys' choir for their Easter radio show. . . . Pat Phelan's first picture was "Susie Slagle." He can hardly wait until his 18th birthday to join the navy.

Two Seats in the Back Row.

Louis Allen, Paramount director, used to work for Gilbert Miller. He couldn't get seats for Helen Hayes' play, so wired Gilbert, who got him two in the back row for Saturday matinee. . . . Diana Lynn, after she'd seen Helen's performance the other night, said, "I'm going to try to act just like her in 'Our Hearts Were Growing Up.'" Well, Diana, Helen started her career in just such parts as you're doing now. So, who knows? If you work hard, you may grow up to be like her. . . . Velos and Yolanda were caught in the recent Ohio flood. For one engagement they traveled by rowboat. . . . The Great Gildersleeve put on 30 pounds for comedy. His doctor ordered it off for health. . . . John Brahm is in a Santa Monica hospital with an eye infection.

A Few Things That Aren't So.

It's not true that Hal Wallis is taking over Paramount studios. He's so happy doing three and four pictures a year, said he, "This is the first real fun I've had in years and you don't suppose I'm going to do anything to upset the apple cart, do you?" . . . Nor is it true that Helen Hayes has played a scene in "Bells of St. Mary's." . . . Nor is it true that Barry Fitzgerald will appear in one scene. . . . Jimmy Melton will arrive here Saturday for his Easter broadcast. . . . John Huston is hovering around Princess Yourievitch, but don't believe it's serious. . . . Remember Helene Reynolds, tobacco heiress? She joins Dick Arlen in "Too Hot for Maneuvers." . . . Sophie Tucker liked the title of Stephen Gross' new show, so she'll appear in "The Legend of Love."

It's a Deal—and a Good One.

Charley Feldman sure got Dana Andrews a good deal. Twentieth Century will pay Dana $1,000 a week while he's in service. . . . Ben Carter and Manton Moreland, colored comics, will produce and star in "Curfew Capers," which opens here in April. Marva Louis [Joe Louis' ex] will be in it, too. . . . Since Bette Davis has her own press agent provided by her studio does that mean every star will be treated likewise, my dear? . . . Virginia Weidler took her 5 year old nephew shopping the other day, when a facetious lady said to him, "I'd like to have a bite of that rosy cheek!" The youngster gave her a look. "Or how about that fat little arm?" Then the child spoke up, "Lady, why don't you buy a sandwich?"

(Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune.)

By Flight Officer David G. Prosser

'NSTALMENT XXX

The time from 3 to 5:30 in the afternoon was the most tedious of the day. Then the house was usually quiet. Madame and Grandmere sometimes went out, or retired to their rooms, or sat silently in the kitchen sewing. The radio had little entertainment to offer during this time, and neither Herk or myself felt like doing much reading. Eventually, I did train myself to study at least two hours of the time, but for poor Herk there was little to do.

The boredom of the afternoon whetted my appetite so that by 6 o'clock I was painfully hungry.

This quiet part of the day usually ended with Louis' arrival at 6 or 6:30. He was on his way home from work, and whether or not he dined with us, he stopped to bring Madame the meat.

Madame kept a very careful account of the meat. She and Louis carefully weighed it on an old jiggly scale that stood in the hallway, and then they made very careful calculations. At first I thought Louis got the meat free, but later learned that, altho his patron allowed him to take it illegally from the abattoir, he did not give it away, but sold it at a lower price than most black market meat.

After Louis and Madame finished their meat business, they usually had a little tete-a-tete over the kitchen table, talking of family matters and invariably of Michiline. Afterward Louis came into the dining room to talk to us, while the women prepared the dinner. If he were going home to dinner, he stayed only a few minutes, but otherwise we talked or listened to the radio until le Pere joined us. At 7:30 we listened to Honneur et Patrie, the French program, broadcast by the BBC in London.

When we could, we tuned in the clandestine transmitter somewhere in France. It was thrilling and terrifying to hear the announcer make a denunciation: "Le Doctor Andre Maritian is a traitor to his country; he collaborates with les Boches," and then repeating the name loudly, "LE DOCTOR ANDRE MARITIAN, RUE DE LA REPUBLIQUE, ANGERS."

Louis said that arch collaborators such as Laval, De Brinon, and Darnaud received coffins almost every day, but they were so well guarded that an attempt to assassinate them was almost impossible. Seven attempts already had been made on De Brinon's life. The last had occurred only a few days before, when a bomb had been thrown into his den, but unfortunately he had gone out a minute or so before.

However, in view of this incident and the great amount of sabotage that had occurred in the Paris region, the German commander had decided that 50 hostages were to be shot. The day after, when the executions were to take place, there were no heroics or speeches against the Boche in our house. The people were subdued tremendously.

After we had finished our evening meal, le Pere Maurice habitually took us out for a long walk, so that I could exercise and strengthen my ankle. I felt a little uncomfortable at causing le Pere to take these walks that must have put considerable wear on the few pairs of shoes that he had. He admitted that leather soles were very difficult to obtain. They cost at least 5,000 francs [$100], and in fact the local shoemaker had refused to resole Louis' shoes for anything other than four kilos [about nine pounds] of meat. Because Louis' job kept him on his feet all day, he had to pay the price.

These walks usually lasted from three-quarters of an hour to an hour. We left the house right after dinner as the women were clearing the table and starting to wash the dishes, which was approximately 9:30 or 10. Few people circulated on the streets then, and even in the day time there was little to fear in these remote suburbs. Few Germans ever penetrated our district and the police we saw were usually off duty.

The first night we took our walk I was amazed to see how inefficiently the French blacked out their windows. They did not bother with black-out curtains, but only closed their shutters, thru which much light escaped.

Making our circuit between 9 and 10 o'clock, I was also surprised to hear the radios in the houses tuned to the French program from London. One heard from almost every house, the words, "Ici Londres, ici Londres." [This is London.] I told le Pere I thought every one had to be very careful when listening to the "illegal broadcasts," but he said it was not dangerous in these streets.

M. Pelerin's house was only a short distance along our circuit, and from time to time we dropped in to see him. He was usually just finishing his dinner, which he ate alone. He had separated from his wife and lived in a one room flat.

We entered M. Pelerin's flat thru a little kitchenette, and then continued on to a bed sitting room. The first night we called upon him, I saw a bushel basket of brussels sprouts standing by the kitchen door. I had thought that one consolation of not being in England was that we would have escaped the brussels sprout season there, but this was not to be the case, for when we left Herk and I lugged the basket back to the house.

M. Pelerin asked us to come into the other room. It was quite plainly furnished, with only a double bed, a huge armoire, and a bed table, all made of dark mahogany. He also had a large radio, which was turned on full volume as we entered the room. It seemed to be louder than those we had heard in the street. I asked him why he took the unnecessary risk of being arrested for the relatively minor offense of listening to Radio London.

He answered rather belligerently, waving the heavy steel hook on the stump of his left arm: "Any one who comes in here will have this in his face—do you think they will try anything then, David—eh?"

"Perhaps with a machine gun," I retorted dryly, resigning myself to the fact that the radio was not going to be turned off.

M. Pelerin then started to chide me about always being afraid, but I did not argue with him.

When the news program from London had come to an end, M. Pelerin told us some of his usual harrowing tales of life in the underground. He had just been talking to a man who had come out of a Gestapo prison, where he had been tortured. The Gestapo had abandoned the old form of torture, that of pushing wooden slivers under the fingernails, to force their prisoners to talk. They now had two adjustable wooden planks which they use as a vise, putting the prisoner's head between and tightening them until the victim either talked, died, or proved to be so obdurate that the Gestapo became discouraged and decided to try something else. The man who had recently left the prison had undergone this torture, and declared that his eye sight was impaired and that he had suffered from almost continual headaches since gaining his freedom.

M. Pelerin asked me why the allied air forces did not drop more supplies to the patriots. "We could do so much with only a little," he said.

I told him that I certainly did not know why these supplies were not dropped, but supposed the allies would drop them shortly before the invasion, so there would be little chance of the Germans having time to seize them. As I finished saying this M. Pelerin grunted, "Invasion, but when will that come?"

He said it was absolutely necessary that the invasion come that autumn. The people of France could not weather another winter, he said, but most important was the fate of the underground.

M. Pelerin asserted that many people in France thought that if the allies did not invade, France would have to arise and liberate itself.

Le Pere asked Monsieur what had become of one of their friends who had been arrested by the Germans. M. Pelerin said that he had been tortured, but partisan agents in the prison had declared that he had not talked.

Poor Herk had sat quietly thru this long conversation, of which he could not understand a word.

As we were leaving M. Pelerin went over to Herk and good naturedly poked him in the ribs, asking him, "Ca va, Robert?"

Herk looked at me with a defeated expression, so I had to explain once again that "Ca va" meant "How are you?" and induce him to reply "Bon."

Incidentally, Robert was the name Herk assumed for his identity card. I picked the name Claud which they now began calling me.

As Herk and I lugged the bushel of brussels sprouts back to the house, le Pere Maurice told us more about M. Pelerin, but not about his actual position in the resistance movement. Monsieur ran a garage, and in his business was allowed to have a car. This was a very valuable asset, for with it he could transport black market goods around Paris, and use it for some underground work.

Le Pere suddenly stopped talking. At first I did not realize why, but then saw a policeman looking at us fixedly. Le Pere nudged me, and whispered, "Be careful," as a precaution to prevent my saying anything audible in my broken accent.

When we passed, this gendarme started to follow us. At first, I thought this was probably coincidence, but when I looked around the third time and saw his buttons shining in the moonlight, he was undoubtedly coming closer to us. He finally overtook us, and as he did so, said something. I was nearest him, and it was to me he addressed his remarks. I was far too upset to have understood or to be able to reply, but le Pere understood immediately and said, "Il est dix heures." [It is 10 o'clock.] I did understand that, and what a relief it was to hear the gendarme say, "Merci," and walk away.

As we continued on our way le Pere said, "That was nothing. See, I told you there was nothing to fear around here."

Soldier Pays Fine Tribute to Stepfather

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

(Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

If you read a recent article about stepfathers, you will remember that I spoke of the fact that a man in that position has it in his power to, practically, make or mar the happiness of a young stepchild. And I did end by saying that, not only does a man have the opportunity to create a happy childhood for his stepchild, but also that he gains greatly himself in the love and admiration that will come to him.

Immediately after writing that article a friend told me a tragic yet exquisitely touching story that I think belongs in this column, to illustrate what I mean.

The mother and stepfather of a beloved boy of 19 have just received a telegram telling that he died in battle in Europe. Whether the boy had a premonition of disaster they could not tell, but shortly before the war department message came, his stepfather received a letter from him, written on the eve of his going into battle. You can imagine that even in his bitter grief he cherishes a letter which reads:

"Dear Dad: There are some things I cannot seem to say to you, but it is easy to write them. I want to thank you for all the love you gave me and for the nine happy years we spent together. I do not remember my own father very well; he was sick so long, but I know if he had lived he could not have meant more to me than you have. If anything happens to me, take good care of Mom. Your loving son."

If this man, who became a stepfather quite young, in his late 20s, had cherished petty jealousy of a first husband and held back his love for that man's son, would he have created a happy childhood to be part of this boy's too brief life, and earned the tribute of that last letter?

Thru the Looking Glass

Things are always being simplified, and now you can have an egg shampoo—complete with a few improvements—without any of the inconveniences of the old fashioned method. If you haven't already discovered it, you might be interested to know that there is an eggnog shampoo on the market made with dehydrated eggs and softening oils.

It's a highly concentrated preparation and a tablespoonful of the liquid in a cup of warm water makes a solution sufficient for two latherings. The smooth yellow concoction blends nicely with the water and, after wetting the hair thoroly, you pour about half the solution over the locks and massage it thoroly thru hair and scalp. Dirt and soil slither away with the abundant lather which is produced, and, after a bit of rinsing, the second portion is used for a final cleansing. With this, as with any shampoo, rinsing is important. Continue rinsing until the rinse water is clear and the hair feels completely free of the shampoo.

The results of the shampoo are more than gratifying. The hair feels, and is, wonderfully clean and has a pretty luster. Equally notable, it seems to have greater manageability. You'll find that the tresses will be more inclined to take and hold a coiffure without wanting to stray out of place. We're all in favor of anything which adds tractability to the locks, since there is nothing more annoying than to be forever having to push and poke the hair into place.

You'll like the giddy little container this comes in. It's a plastic egg, real looking and set on a little pedestal. After you've used up the contents, you'll find some decorative use for it, such as a holder for a small green plant or a little sprig of spring flowers.

FASHIONS

By Angela

Hot weather fashions are receiving earnest consideration these pleasant spring days. Most of the new cotton models for utility wear are smart one piece creations with brief sleeves and in fresh plaids and checks, in large and small patterns. They are modestly priced and well worth the money.

Crisp and cool looking is the large brown and white check dress at the left with a low cut square neckline and off-center closing. A ruffle with a flat tailored bow trims the neckline. An inset belt marks the waistline. It is available in sizes 9 to 17 and in red and blue checks.

A slight Mexican influence is noted in the simple brown and white check dress in the center, with a drawstring neckline and short puffed sleeves. Cotton lace embroidery forms scallops and bows on the skirt, and a double band of narrow lace creates a yoke effect on the bodice. The dress has a side button closing and stitched-in belt. It is available in sizes 9 to 17 and in red, blue, and green.

The one piece summer plaid dress at the right with short sleeves and buttoning down the front combines red, brown, green, blue, and white. The vee neckline has short notched lapels and a rounded collar. Two real chest pockets repeat the curved line of the collar. A simulated brown alligator belt is a becoming contrast to the dress material. It is available in sizes 12 to 20.

Spring Fashions

One of today's patterns makes a likable and wearable shirtwaist frock for either spring fabrics or summer cottons. Stripes and plain colors make up equally well. The other design creates a blouse with a bow-tied neckline and the new brief sleeves to be a companion to your suits. Style No. 3745 is designed for sizes 14 to 50. Size 36 requires 3½ yards of 39 inch fabric. Style No. 2842 is designed for sizes 10 to 40. Size 16 requires 1¾ yards of 35 or 39 inch material. Each pattern is 10 cents, plus 2 cents for mailing.

Order Clotilde patterns from Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central Annex, NEW YORK CITY. Print name and address; state size. Each pattern is 10 cents, plus 2 cents for mailing. The spring fashion book, on sale at Tribune Public Service offices, is 15 cents; 12 cents if ordered by mail with a pattern.

Double Bill: Western Film (Routine); War Documentary (Dull)

"NEVADA"

Produced by RKO Radio, directed by Edward Killy, featuring Bob Mitchum, Anne Jeffreys, Guinn Williams, and Nancy Gates, and presented at the Monroe.

"BEHIND THE ENEMY LINES"

Distributed by Globe Film company, edited and compiled by Maj. Ross Duff Whytock, narrated by Bud Pollard, and also presented at the Monroe.

By Mae Tinée

"Nevada" is another western, this time about the discovery of the Comstock lode. The plot is long and complicated and the acting only average. Bob Mitchum is the honest hero who gets hep to the skullduggery and saves the purty gal from the villain. It's based on a Zane Grey novel.

Most of "Behind the Enemy Lines" seemed extremely familiar to me. It contains very little that you haven't seen in news reels at one time or another. The accompanying comment is uninspired, repetitious, and constant, and it runs for one hour and 10 wearying minutes.

DAY by DAY on the FARM By GAIL COMPTON

March 29, 1945

THIS is a bewildering spring. Never before in the memory of men at the farm has warm weather come so early. Usually at this time the workers still wear their heavy coats and the wind is sharp and cold as it whips around the corner of the barn. Now the breeze is balmy and shirt sleeves are the correct dress.

The workers are a bit skeptical of the early spring and are not inclined to trust it. Field work is going ahead at the Fox river farm and oats are scheduled to be planted shortly. The manager of the Wheaton farm, with much of his plowing done, is holding back to see what happens.

Nature Struts Its Stuff

Altho the men do not trust this warm weather, the trees and shrubs seem to have complete faith that there will be no more cold snaps. The big glistening buds on the horse chestnut trees are opening. The magnolia tree in the arboretum is bursting forth into full bloom. The anemones are beginning to come up and the rhubarb plants are leafing in great style. The gardener already has set out long rows of vegetables and the elm trees have been sprayed and are budding profusely. The lilacs are in leaf and the bloom buds are well filled.

In the poultry yard the turkeys are convinced spring is here to stay, for they are laying eggs rapidly. More than 60 eggs have been gathered so far, and as soon as there are 100 on hand they will be sent to the incubator. One turkey hen has defied all efforts to provide it with a good nesting site. It insists on laying its eggs in a bare feed bunk in the cattle shed. Each egg it lays on the hard boards promptly breaks. Cozy nests of straw have been built in several locations for the stubborn fowl, but it refuses to use them.

Wheat Fields Showy

The wheat fields are a brilliant green and are showing good growth. The hay fields display plants two inches high and if the weather remains good there should be an excellent first crop. The willows along the ponds have lost their early spring yellow and now are a soft green. Everywhere the tracery of the trees has changed from the bare and austere outlines of winter to the delicate lacery of spring. The oaks and shagbark hickories, usually among the last to bud, have swollen terminals that promise full blown buds in a short time.

The only winter casualties were the beds of lilies-of-the-valley. They seemed to have winter killed, and replanting is indicated. Recent rains have been beneficial to the dry soil, which absorbed all the moisture with little run off. The farm looks beautiful.

The GARDEN by Ben Markland

INCREASE in numbers of home freezers and community freezing lockers is causing many gardeners to inquire about vegetable and fruit varieties suitable for this kind of preservation.

The extension service, University of Illinois college of agriculture, has prepared a 20 page booklet giving complete information on this subject. Illinois residents may get the booklet without charge by writing to the college at Urbana and requesting circular 510.

Vegetable varieties especially recommended by extension specialists after kitchen tests include Illinois Large Podded lima beans, Little Marvel peas; Detroit Dark Red beets; Mary Washington asparagus; Burpee Stringless Greenpod snap beans; Blight Resistant Savoy, Bloomsdale Long Standing, King of Denmark, and Victoria spinach; Funk Delicious and Hokkaido soybeans, and Golden Cross bantam sweet corn.

Gen. Tompkins' Second Son Killed in Action

Washington, D. C., March 29 (AP)—Maj. William F. Tompkins Jr., 25, was killed in action in Germany on March 13. He was the second son of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Tompkins, of Washington, to lose his life in this war. Lt. George H. Tompkins was killed in France last September. A third son, 2d Lt. Christopher Tompkins of the marines, is stationed at Camp Pendleton, Cal.

MONTREAL, March 29 (AP)—The Montreal Canadiens hit their top form tonight to ride to a 10 to 3 victory over the Toronto Maple Leafs and force at least one more game in their eight point semi-final series.

The Leafs still lead the series six points to four, but if the Canadiens can display tonight's form in the Saturday night game at Toronto they will tie the series and make a deciding game necessary back here next Tuesday.

Richard Scores Four

Toronto got two quick goals from the sticks of Lorne Carr and Ted Kennedy in the first period. They got another in the second when Elwin Morris pushed in his first goal of the National Hockey league season. The rest of the time the time the Canucks were rolling in the midseason form for which the Montreal fans had looked in vain up to this point in the series.

Maurice Richard led the assault with four goals. Elmer Lach got another as the big line that had been practically throttled in the first four games broke loose.

12,300 Watch Game.

A crowd of 12,300 saw the Canadiens ahead, 3 to 2 in the first after the Leafs had cut down an early lead by scoring twice while Butch Stahan was serving a penalty. They watched Montreal move out in front, 5 to 3, by the end of the second and then run wild with five goals in the third.

WIN IN OVERTIME

Detroit, Mich., March 29 (AP)—Modere Bruneteau's 15 foot drive from left wing after 17 minutes, 12 seconds of the overtime period gave the Detroit Red Wings a 3 to 2 victory over the Boston Bruins before 12,512 fans here tonight and sent the Wings into a 3 to 2 lead in games in the first round National Hockey league play-offs.

Detroit now needs only a victory in Sunday's game at Boston to enter the Stanley cup finals.

Bruneteau Scores Two

Bruneteau, who as a Detroit rookie scored the only goal in one of hockey's longest overtime games, came back as a veteran tonight to break up a determined Boston attempt to upset the Red Wings. His accurate low shot climaxed a neat play in which Joe Carveth carried the puck in on right wing and passed to Bill Hollett at center, who fed it perfectly to the waiting Bruneteau.

Bruneteau scored two of the three Detroit goals, flipping the first one over Boston Goalie Paul Bibeault less than three minutes after the game started.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

BY ARCH WARD.

THE WAKE today is devoted entirely to contributors whose verses deal with an event sacred to Christians the world over.

Calvary

When Christ was crucified on Calvary,
His mother stood there, helpless and forlorn,
Her heart cried out in bitter agony
When she beheld her Son; His body torn
With wounds from oft repeated blows; then she
With stabbing thrust felt all a mother's loss,
And shared His cruel sufferings till He,
Consumed with anguish, died upon the cross.

Transfixed, she gazed on Him. Can this be He,
This gentle Son whom she so oft caressed,
Who raised the dead, Who made the blind to see,
Who pardoned sinners, little children blest?
With Mary, at the cross, you'll find relief.
—Katharine Isabelle Dignum.

Look to the Cross

Once again mankind has left Him
On the cross to suffer there,
All too few are they who sorrow
And kneel at His feet in prayer.
Thru the haze of strife and turmoil
I behold Him, Christ our King,
Crucified and now around Him

Mankind has too soon forgotten
That love only rights each wrong
And will brighten every household
Filling hearts with glorious song.
This He told us—so why doubt Him?
So believe and also sorrow
—G. Gordon Carter.

Redemption

"I thirst." He cried, as there He hung,
Suspended between earth and sky,

And Dismas hanging at His side,
Rebukes his fellow thief
For blasphemy;
Then, turning to the dying Saviour cried,
"O Lord, remember me, this day,
Dost abide!" —Frances Cokely.

The Crucifixion

For all to see,
He suffered and died
For humanity.

No word of reproach
Did He utter to those
Who had driven cruel spikes
Thru hands and toes.

As the thorny crown
Was placed on His head,
"Forgive them, dear Father,"
Was all that He said.

For the sins of all mankind
He bravely met death,
And prayed for each soul
With His last gasping breath.

Of His life should be Enshrined in our hearts
Thru eternity.
—Charles Evans Perry.

This Weird Rehearsal

Good Friday's scene is our sad life today!
The "rabble" lives in warring lords, who thirst
For blood of innocents, in this [youths'] fray.
And she who stood beside the Cross when Christ
Had died to save us from iniquity
Now lives in those whose sons are sacrificed
On war's bleak cross, to save our liberty!
But that Good Friday's clouds had passed, and earth
So these dark days will vanish with their dearth
Of war, for Peace will dawn, and thus destroy.
When will this weird rehearsal end, dear Lord?
When will the dawn of Peace be our reward?
—Jewel McCabe Brennen.

The Good Thief

"This day," the dying Christ said,
"thou shalt be
"In Paradise." His anguished eyes were filled
With love divine for all humanity,
And on his cross the good thief's self was thrilled.

Repentance was the cross on which he hung;
Contrition filled his soul with silent prayer,
And joyous were these words from his parched tongue,
To Him: "Lord, am I not already there?" —Anne C. Korpics.

Golden Gloves Squad Names Corp. Quijano to Captaincy

BY CHARLES BARTLETT

Corp. Adolfo Quijano of the El Paso Quijanos, who bears a decided facial resemblance to the cinema's Errol Flynn, will lead Chicago's Golden Gloves team against New York in the 18th annual Intercity struggle with the cream of New York's fighters in the Chicago Stadium Wednesday evening.

CORP. ADOLFO QUIJANO

The handsome Quijano, who, unlike Mr. Flynn, does all of his boxing in a regulation ring, yesterday was elected captain of the team which will endeavor to add to Chicago's already imposing record of 10 Intercity triumphs against four for New York, with three of the series having ended in 8 to 8 deadlocks. Election of Quijano was one of the most popular developments of the training program which will continue today in the gymnasium of the Illinois Athletic club.

Second Service Man Leader

Thus, for the second year, a service man will captain the Chicagoans in what is regarded as the toughest battle in amateur boxing. Leader of the 1944 team was Pvt. Ragon Kinney, whose climactic heavyweight triumph in Madison Square Garden last March earned a 9 to 7 victory over the easterners on their home grounds.

Corp. Quijano and his Golden Gloves buddies have proved themselves one of the most determined squads ever assembled here. They have been forewarned that the New York invaders, who will arrive in Chicago tomorrow morning, constitute the strongest squad that has been recruited from the Atlantic seaboard in years.

Go Full Route Today

Capt. Johnny Behr, head coach of the Chicago team, and his colleagues—Fred Caserio, Issy Kline, Pop Howard, Dick Fitzpatrick, and Eddie Nichols—announced after yesterday's workout in the I. A. C. gymnasium that today is the day the boys have been awaiting since they reported for training on March 21. The coaches have brought their charges along gradually, beginning with a single round of boxing, and stepping up to two rounds last Monday.

Today the boys will go the full route of three three-minute rounds, the same distance they must travel Wednesday night, if they would win the sport's highest honor—an Intercity golden glove. Judging by yesterday's boxing session, when there was a constant succession of knockdowns, none of the members of the team plans to go those full nine minutes. They're out to win by knockouts, from the heavyweights down to the smaller fellows.

Adolfo Is a Bombardier

Quijano, the team captain, will tell you that he owes both his present weight and his boxing skill to his 28 months in the service. Born 23 years ago in El Paso, Tex., Adolfo became interested in the

N.Y. GLOVERS HIT TRAIL FOR CHICAGO TODAY

See End of West's Supremacy

BY BILL MURTHA
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Bear Mountain, N. Y., March 29—Preparing to break training camp tomorrow for their journey to Chicago to meet the champions of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, the New York Golden Gloves team went thru its last workout this afternoon on eastern soil.

The eastern coaches scheduled a full session for every member of the 27 man squad and the gymnasium was busy for nearly four hours as the boys who hope to end Chicago's string of victories on its own home grounds went thru a spirited workout. The day had started with a little jaunt of five miles thru the Catskill foothills and so beneficient has been the training period here that no one was even breathing hard at the conclusion of the run. When they came here from New York 10 days ago some of the boys had difficulty negotiating two miles.

The New York champions who meet the western titlists also got an intensive drill in tactics. Eddie Murphy, who holds the New York lightweight title, and Rafael Reveron, the Puerto Rican southpaw who won the featherweight championship, were pitted against each other to familiarize them with the opposition. The eastern coaches who scouted the westerners say Reveron fights like the western lightweight champion, Bernard Paige.

Respect Corp. Quijano

As a matter of fact, the eastern coaches aren't too concerned about Murphy in the ring with a southpaw. He has fought several in his amateur career and beat them all. Reveron's opponent will be a Chicago alternate, the eastern coaches believe, but even without knowing the identity of his foe, Reveron scarcely can help but benefit by his three snappy rounds with Murphy.

Another New Yorker who received attention from the trio of coaches during the workout was Roland La Starza, the light heavyweight champion who is slated to square off with Corp. Adolfo Quijano, the California soldier. Quijano impressed the scouts as one of the best on the western team, but they insist that Quijano met no one in the tournament of champions as accomplished as La Starza. This, they figure, will be the night's best bout. They know Adolfo can punch, and hard, but Rolly, too, can hit and probably is as rugged an amateur as the eastern tournament has seen in five years.

One of the best boxers on the New York team is the eastern captain, Laverne Roach, who meets Gilbert Garcia of Texas in the championship bracket in the 147 pound class. Roach never looks bad in the ring even against such an accomplished scrapper as Wendy Wilson, intercity winner last year, who went two rounds with him today. The handsome marine from Plainview, Tex., is a natural, a standout of the type Ray Robinson was back in 1938-'39 when he was unbeatable in Golden Gloves ranks.

Just Wait and See

The coaches were well satisfied with their charges at the conclusion of the workout. Tho they make no predictions at this point and say "wait till we see how they look after working a day or two in Chicago," they'd still refuse to trade the squad in their charge even up with the Chicagoans.

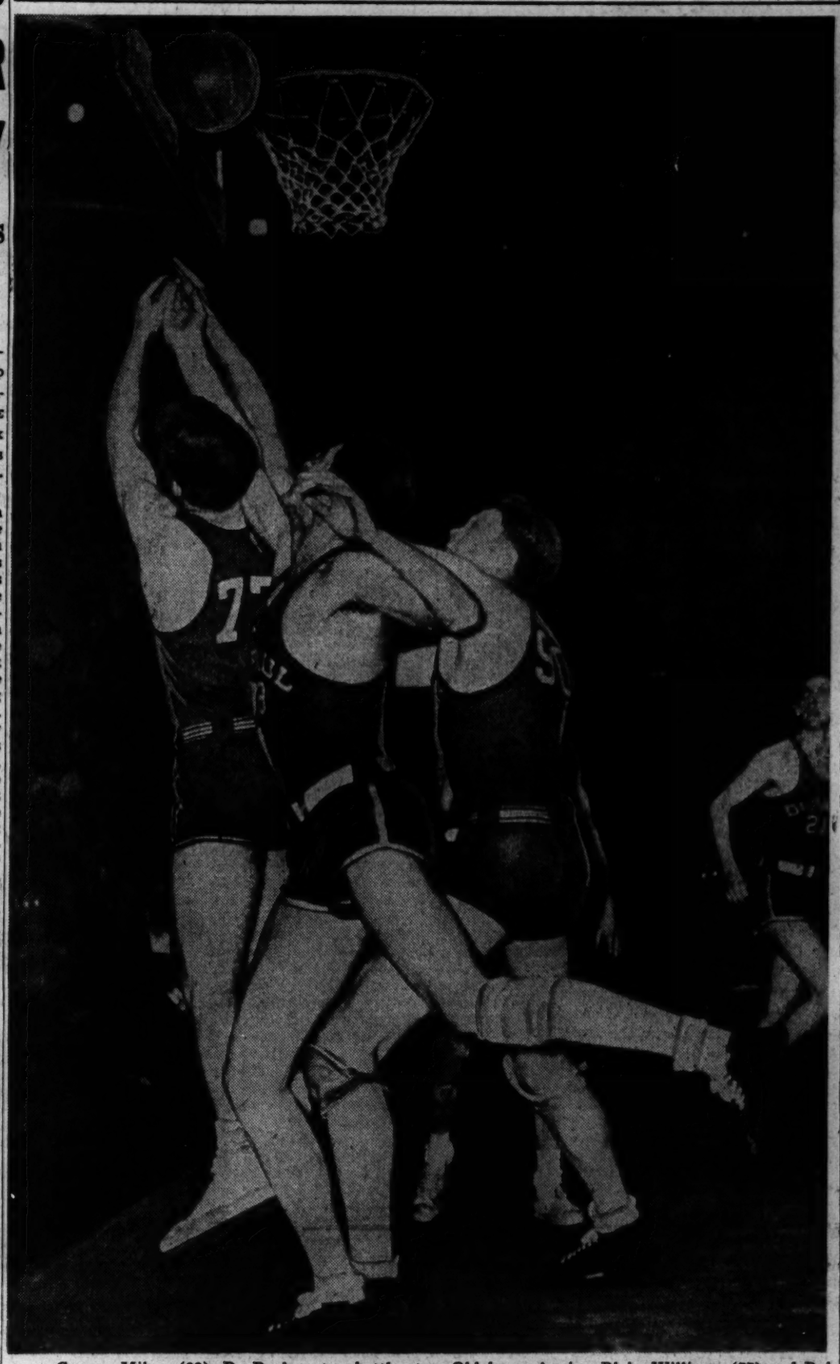
The string of defeats inflicted by the Chicago teams since the series started 18 years ago rankles and the easterners are particularly annoyed because none of the four defeats dealt to Chicago has come in that city. They've set heart and soul on winning this year.

As the last of the boxers piled out of the gym this afternoon they paused to watch Brooklyn Dodger and Montreal Royal hopefuls finishing up their day's training chores on the diamond adjoining the inn.

JAMES HUGHEY, FORMER PITCHER IN MAJORS, DIES

Coldwater, Mich., March 29 [Special]—James Hughey, 76, a first string pitcher with the St. Louis Browns in 1908, and later with the Cleveland Indians, Chicago White Sox and Philadelphia Athletics died in a hospital here today. Hughey retired after 15 years service on the mound and opened a general store in a rural district near here which he operated for many years.

ONCE WHEN GEORGE COULDN'T DO IT



George Mikan (99), De Paul center, battles two Oklahoma Aggies, Blake Williams (77) and Bob Kurland (90) for rebound under basket in last night's basketball game in Madison Square Garden. JIMMY WILSON CAN'T SEE CUBS IN PENNANT ROLE

BY EDWARD BURNS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

French Lick, Ind., March 29—Jimmy Wilson, the fine gentleman who was manager of the Cubs during their 1943 and 1944 sojourns at this summery spa, was here today, as a Cincinnati Red, to complete arrangements for the party of 42 Reds which will arrive here Monday just in time for supper. He did not pick the Cubs to win the 1945 pennant.

Said Jimmy: "The Cubs have my next to best wishes, that is to say, if the Reds can't win the pennant I would be as pleased to see Chicago win as anybody. However, as I see it, the Cubs are no better than they were in the pitching department and if they are better over all it will be because of the great improvement in the catching as compared with last season.

Catching Is Not Enough

"They have three fine catchers, none of whom I had at the start of last season. Mickey Livingston, Dewey Williams, and Paul Gillespie will be a great help to the team, but not enough, I fear, to swing a pennant."

Jimmy recalled that just a little later than this last spring many observers were picking the Cubs to give the Cardinals a tussle for the pennant, with emphasis placed on the presence of Hank Wyse, Paul Derringer, and Ed Hanyzewski, and the promised arrival of Claude Passeau.

These four pitchers are counted upon again this year as the big four, or, with Bob Chipman, the other four-fifths of the big five. These four won 40 and lost 42, only one per-

White Sox May Thrive in '45 if They Sign Four Holdouts

BY IRVING VAUGHAN
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Terre Haute, Ind., March 29—The White Sox were reduced to almost total leisure today by courtesy of the weather man, with Manager James Dykes assisting. Rain forced the squad to remain under the grandstand and, after about a half hour of plain throwing, mainly by members of the pitching department, the boss concluded it was a good time to award the off-day he has been promising since his discovery that his pupils were in pretty good physical shape.

Altho he wouldn't object to seeing his two holdout pitchers—Orval Grove and Johnny Humphries—in the class room, Dykes is quite happy over the fact that the other men destined to carry the mound load are about ready to polish up on curves and speed. Some of them have already done a bit of their advanced work but only lightly. This is particularly true of Thornton Lee, the aged lefty, who hopes that the broken arm he suffered last season marked the end of a series of misfortunes covering three years.

All Is Not Bright

The happiness over the fact that the pitching corps is free of sore arms doesn't mean that Dykes has no worries. There are a lot of vacancies to be filled and, while he has a fairly definite idea how he is going to put a team on the field, he is more than a little hazy about the quality, especially in view of the desire to shake off memories of the seventh place finish of last season.

When the Sox finished seventh in 1944 they had the help of Thurman Tucker, their best defensive outfielder; Infielder-Outfielder Ralph Hodgin, just about their best hitter, and Gordon Maltzberger, the man with the rubber arm who dashed in day after day to save decisions for faltering pitching mates. They are in Uncle Sam's employ now, and so far as he can see at the moment, Dykes hasn't a replacement for any one of the three.

Dan Reynolds Is Missed

Additional complications have been tossed into the camp plans by the injury of Dan Reynolds, the leading shortstop candidate, the impending examination for army service of Infielder Floyd Baker, and the continued absence of a first baseman except for the transplanted Bill Nagel, who has feet blisters and is unable to do much about his 15 pounds of excess weight. Reynolds, who pulled a charley horse in his right leg, may have to rest for as long as a week. Until Dan can get himself back into fighting trim Dykes will have to figure on Cass Michaels as his shortstop. The latter is a promising kid but needs more minor league schooling.

Nothing has been heard from Grey Clarke, who did much of the Sox third basing last season. He signed his contract, but it is possible that he won't report. Joe Orengo, prospective first baseman, was supposed to have gotten under way more than a week ago, but last reports indicated he is playing ball around San Francisco. His appearance would release Nagel as a first sacker, the latter then becoming a helper for Tony Cuccinello at third.

LITTLE ROCK AND NASHVILLE GIRLS IN BASKET FINAL

St. Joseph, Mo., March 29 (AP)—The Nashville Convacs defeated the Wichita, Kas., Boeings, 28 to 11, and the Dr. Peppers of Little Rock, Ark., beat Nashville Business college, 25 to 15, tonight in the semi-finals of the Women's National A. A. U. basketball tournament.

The Convac victory was paced by Alline Banks Pate, who scored 20 of the 28 points.

MIKAN LEAVES GAME ON FOULS IN FIRST HALF

Red Cross Benefit Yields $50,000

New York, March 29 (AP)—Oklahoma A. & M., National Collegiate Athletic association champion, won the mythical national basketball championship tonight, defeating De Paul university of Chicago, the New York Invitation tournament winner, 52 to 44, in a benefit game at Madison Square Garden that turned more than $50,000 over to the Red Cross.

The battle of giants between the Aggies' 7 foot Bob Kurland and 6 foot 9 inch George Mikan of De Paul failed to materialize as Mikan went out of the game on five fouls after 14 minutes of the first half. Before he left the floor, their play had been almost even, with Mikan accounting for nine points and Kurland eight.

Demons Put Up Battle

With the departure of Mikan the crowd of 18,158, which swelled the attendance for 26 Garden double headers this season to 442,293, expected the Aggies to turn the game into a rout, altho they trailed, 21 to 16, at the time. De Paul, however, changed its tactics, and held its 5 point margin thru the period, leaving the floor with to 26 to 21 lead.

With the start of the second half, Cecil Hankins went wild as the Oklahomans clamped a tight defense on the Demons. De Paul went scoreless for five minutes while Hankins dropped in 7 points and Doyle Parrack added 2 more to give the Aggies a 30 to 26 lead.

Three More Demons Foul Out

Hankins, who paced the Aggies with 20 points, continued his fine shooting, but De Paul finally found the range on the set shooting of little Ernie Di Benedetto and managed to stay in striking distance until the last five minutes when three more of its regulars—Jack Allen, Gene Stump, and Whitey Kachan—went out on fouls. Twenty-five fouls were called against De Paul and 16 against the Aggies.

After scoring 10 points in the first half, Kurland took only two shots in the final period and made one of them good. He added two free throws to boost his total to 14 points. While turning the task of scoring over to his mates, the big redhead did a great job of feeding the ball off the pivot and controling the play off the backboards when De Paul had nobody to match his height.

N. Y. U. Beats Bowling Green

Stump and Di Benedetto led De Paul with 12 points each. The victory gave Coach Hank Iba his biggest triumph in 18 years of coaching, and squared matters for the season with De Paul since the Blue Demons whipped the Aggies by two points earlier in Chicago in the year.

New York university nosed out Bowling Green, 63 to 61, in the preliminary game between the runners-up of the two tournaments. Lineups:

centage point better than the team's first division, but rather dull, sub-.500 finish which showed 75 victories and 79 losses for a final league percentage of .487 in 1944.

Bed Secretary Is Surprised

Wilson, a pal of Tom Taggart, overlord of the Pluto kingdom, was accompanied to French Lick by Bill McCorry, traveling secretary of the Reds. McCorry expressed surprise that the Cubs had elected to make a deep mystery of the plans of the Reds to come here to finish up their training season and said he failed to see any reason for pussyfooting in the program to go on with the exhibition program in Louisville.

McCorry said the plan to play at Fort Knox and Louisville had been sanctioned and that there had been no need for any sly work in connection with that schedule.

Morning showers dampened the regular diamond here today, but Manager Charley Grimm kept intact his record of not missing a practice. The boys held a brief workout on the depot knoll.

DELAY MAKING FINAL CHOICE OF SOCCER JUNIORS

The selection committee in charge of picking a Chicago junior soccer team to meet the St. Louis junior champions in St. Louis on April 15 watched the Hornets beat the Maroons, 5 to 1, yesterday in the Sparta stadium, but was unable to make its final choices for all positions on the squad.

Several players showed ability which indicated they will land places on the Chicago team, among them being Frank Strang, goalie for the Maroons, Russell Lee, a young Chinese player, Earl Schubert and Harry Stiles.

A team made up of probable All-Star squad members will meet the Workers tomorrow, with the committee expecting to announce final selections after the contest.

Curtis Bay, Md., March 29 (AP)—Coast Guardsman Hank Sauer, former Cincinnati Red, singled home Mikey Witek, recent Giant, with the 11th inning run that gave the Curtis Bay Cutters a 5 to 4 exhibition baseball victory over the Boston Braves today.

Sauer beat the Braves almost single handed, for he hit a homer in the sixth inning and started the Cutters' two run rally in the eighth with a double to force the game into overtime.

The Cutters pounded Tom Earley and Harry Petty for 14 hits. The braves collected 12 off Pitchers Frank Smith, Don Kerr, both big league farm hands, and Bob Peterson, who drew credit for the victory.

McCORMICK WITH REDS

Bloomington, Ind., March 29 (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds' infield looked a bit like that of other and better years today, as Frank McCormick donned a uniform, took his accustomed place at first, and led the team in hours of indoor drill. Rain prevented outdoor work. Woody Williams was at second again today; Steve Mesner at third, and Walter Flager at short.

TIGERS RAINED OUT

Evansville, Ind., March 30 (AP)—Hain today washed out the second Detroit Tiger workout in 16 days of spring training. Fewer than a half dozen men were in uniform when a downpour chased them back to the hotel and the drill was called off. The Tigers' next squad game will be played Saturday.

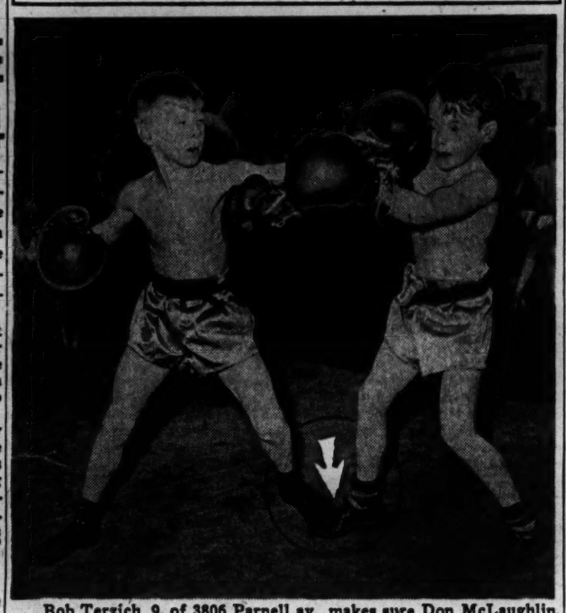
Lakewood, N. Y., March 29 (AP)—With the arrival today of Pitcher Rube Fischer, three-fourths of the Giants' roster, or 30 players, now are in camp. Sixteen of them are pitchers. Counting the Jersey City squad and the 16 and 17 year old youngsters under the sponsorship of Carl Hubbell, head of the Giants' farm system, there are 155 players here.

APPROVES DIXIE'S OFFER

Bear Mountain, N. Y., March 29 (AP)—"If Dixie Walker will accept his salary in war bonds which will have a maturity value of the price he has put on his services he can consider himself as good as signed to a Dodger contract," said Branch Rickey, Brooklyn club president today when informed his principal holdout and National league batting champion had expressed a willingness to be paid in bonds this year.

Walker has demanded a salary of $22,500. The purchase price of bonds with a maturity value of that amount would be $16,875. The Dodgers latest salary offer to the holdout was $18,000. Last year Walker received $14,000.

NOW, JUST TRY TO RETREAT!



Bob Terzich, 9, of 3806 Parnell av., makes sure Don McLaughlin, also 9, of 3411 Wallace st., will not back away from his right by pinning the latter's right foot (see circle) as the two battle for a position on the Chicago Boys' club team. The bout took place last night in the club's gymnasium, upstairs from the Sheffield Avenue Police station during elimination bouts to name representatives for a coming club show.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Youthful enthusiasm will make up for lack of experience when members of the Sheffield av. branch of the Chicago Boy's club engage the Libertyville Boys' club representatives in a boxing show a week from tonight in the Valentine Boy's club gymnasium. The lack of experience comes from the fact that the participants will range in age from 6 to 14, at which time the boys automatically graduate from the group.

Director Anthony Nicolette instructs members of the Sheffield av. branch in the clubroom, once a courtroom, above the district police station. Purpose of the organization is to combat juvenile delinquency thru competitive athletics, boxing being one of the main forms of exercise designed to keep the boys active and off the street corners.

sport when he was 16. His parents were opposed to his interest in firing punches, but he did manage to crowd in one bout seven years ago, when he was a middleweight.

He was inducted at Fort Bliss, near El Paso, and has been stationed at the Muroc, Cal., base of the 4th army air force for the last five months as a bombardier. He has had 24 fights, winning 16 of them by knockouts. He punched his way to the title in the preliminary tournament conducted by the Los Angeles Times by scoring three consecutive knockouts.

Final Bout One to Remember

In the Tournament of Champions in the Stadium in February, Adolfo introduced himself and a terrific right hand by knocking out his first two opponents, Anton Thorstenston of Minneapolis and Jimmy Henderson of Fort Wayne, in the first round. John Gulley, durable St. Louis Negro, forced him to the three round limit in his third bout, as did Sgt. George Siebert of Chanute field in the semi-final session in the Stadium on March 9. Came the title battle, and Corp. Tom Attra, light heavyweight victor in 1942, made a brave stand against Quijano, but the latter proved too much after 100 seconds of the first round and was awarded a technical knockout verdict.

BOMBERS BEAT BIG AYES IN G. I. BASKET MEET

FLORENCE, Italy, March 29 (AP)—Pvt. Steve Wojnolowicz, only G. I. on the 321st bomb group's Mitchell Bombers, showed his officer teammates how it is done tonight as his squad reached the finals in the Mediterranean theater basketball championships, by defeating the 92d Negro division's Buffalo Big Ayes, 42 to 41.

Wojnolowicz, high school star from Detroit, not only led his team with 11 points but was superb on defense. The winners clash tomorrow with the 21st aviation engineer Bulldozers, Adriatic zone champions, for the all-air force title.

The Bulldozers are the only unbeaten team left in the double elimination tourney. If the Bombers win tomorrow, the two quintets will be forced to play again Saturday. The winners will participate in the special three team tourney that starts April 9 in Cairo.

GOPHER NINE TITLE THREAT TO WOLVERINES

The Michigan and Minnesota athletic rivalry, more renowned in football for the Little Brown Jug, may have its counterpart in Big Nine baseball this season as the Wolverines defend their Western conference championship.

Veteran Coach Ray Fischer, starting his 25th season at Michigan, also expects trouble from Illinois and Ohio State but his main worry is Minnesota, where nine veterans are available. Fisher has six lettermen back, but Minnesota will have pitching strength which Fisher does not believe his squad can match.

The league race opens on April 6 with games scheduled for Friday and Saturday of each week until June 9. All teams will play 12 games each with the exception of Iowa, which will have but eight. The Hawkeyes will complete its schedule earliest, on April 28. The complete schedule per school:

COACHES RULE NAKAMA OUT OF N. C. A. A. SWIM

Ann Arbor, Mich., March 29 (AP)—Coaches ruled at a meeting tonight that Keo Nakama, Ohio State swimming star, was ineligible to compete in the 22d annual national collegiate swimming meet opening here tomorrow because he is a graduate student.

The ruling also eliminated from competition Robert Stumpner, one of Indiana's two entries, and Bob Mowerson, veteran Michigan free style star.

Swimming Coach Mike Peppe of Ohio State had brought Nakama to Ann Arbor, contending he was eligible because meet officials last year had allowed Charles Betterman, a graduate student at Columbia, to compete. He won both the high and low board diving events.

Nakama Won Two Last Year

Coaches tonight pointed out, however, that last year's decision was an error and Betterman should not have been permitted to compete. Nakama last year won the 440 yard free style and the 1,500 meter event and took second in the 220 yard free style.

Approximately 70 athletes from 11 schools will compete in the meet which will conclude Saturday night. Michigan is the favorite to win the team title but spectator interest will be centered in individual duels. Regarded as the top attraction of the two day session is the 100 yard free style race between Capt. Merton Church of Michigan and Columbia's Gene Rogers. Church and Rogers move into the spotlight usually reserved for Alan Ford, Yale's record breaker who will be kept in the east because of navy duties.

Rogers Wins 56 of 57

Church, who swam second to Ford in last year's N. C. A. A. century, anticipates real trouble from Rogers who is at his best in the longer distances but has indicated considerable ability in the shorter free style dashes. A senior at Columbia, Rogers boasts an enviable record. In 57 dual meets he has lost one race—that to Ford in a contest so close that both men were clocked in two minutes and 11 seconds for the 220.

Second to the Church-Rogers meeting in interest will be the clash between Michigan's Heini Kessler, Minnesota's Vern Ojempa, and Cornell's Paul Murray in the breast stroke. Murray has turned in a time of 2:28.5 for the event this year, faster than Kessler's and Ojempa's 2:35.8 effort in winning the Big Nine title.

White, Shand Will Duel

Joe Hardman, star breast stroke swimmer of Illinois Tech, will carry the Techawk colors tomorrow. Hardman, a member of the V-12 unit, was undefeated during the regular season in meets against Illinois, Iowa, Northwestern, and Lawrence.

Schools represented in addition to Cornell, Columbia, Ohio State, Michigan, Iowa, Illinois Tech, Minnesota, and Princeton include Wayne, Michigan State, Canisius, Northwestern, Rensselaer Poly, Indiana, and Purdue.

PACIFIC COAST LEAGUE TO OPEN PLAY TOMORROW

Los Angeles, Cal., March 29 (AP)—The Pacific Coast league, as usual, will be the first to break the baseball barrier. Its opening Saturday will be watched closely thruout the country since, because of its early start, the league will serve as a test tube for another year of war time baseball.

Advance sales indicate interest is even greater than it was in 1944, when the league had the biggest season in its history.

As was the case a year ago, club owners can promise nothing definite in the matter of playing talent which goes to make a winner. As things turned out the 1944 race was the closest in the history of the league, and one of the tightest on record in baseball.

Since the baseball parks are among the few places people still may go for entertainment, it seems inevitable that the league will enjoy a fine season.

Brookline, Mass., March 29 (AP)—Mrs. Helen Pedersen Rihbany of New York, a veteran in top flight tennis competition, today gained her first national title by defeating Katherine Winthrop of Hamilton, the defending champion, 4-6, 6-2, 6-3, in the final of the women's indoor singles competition at Longwood.

Steadiness in the pinches gave the New Yorker her victory, for Miss Winthrop, noted for her forehand driving, was at the top of her game.

YANKS BROKEN RING IN MAIL UPSETS HIS WIFE

The wedding ring she gave to her husband, Pvt. Raymond Eichhorn, 31, a soldier in the Philippines, was returned by mail to Mrs. Juliet Eichhorn, 8303 S. Sangamon st., yesterday. Glued to a piece of paper, the ring bore saw marks and was twisted and broken. No message accompanied it.

Pvt. R. Eichhorn

DISCOVER $5,065 IN BANK BOX OF MURDER VICTIM

Police investigating the slaying in his apartment Tuesday of Andrew Di Fiore, 57, of 1125 Webster av., yesterday opened a safety deposit box in the Aetna State bank, 2375 Lincoln av., and found $5,065, promissory notes totaling $3,750, and jewelry, including eight diamond rings belonging to Di Fiore.

Present were Capt. P. B. O'Connell of the Hudson av. station, Ray Johnson, member of the state inheritance tax division, Elnar E. Erie of the coroner's staff, and Joseph Longo, nephew of Di Fiore.

Reports that Di Fiore, who did not trust banks, may have been killed by persons seeking his money caused authorities to make a thoro search of his apartment. Only bank books showing deposits of $2,746 in two north side banks were found.

Police, scanning the promisory notes for a possible clew in the belief that Di Fiore may have attempted to force collection, said that none was due at present. The money found consisted of $100 bills totaling $3,000; $20 bills amounting to $1,000, and $1,000 in $10 bills. The remainder was in bills of $5 denomination and gold pieces. Jewelry included a wristwatch and three men's pocket watches.

ALDERMEN SEEK POWER TO RULE ON JAYWALKING

Action to reduce Chicago's traffic toll by obtaining more home rule over speed limits and pedestrian jaywalking was taken by the city council traffic and public safety committee yesterday on recommendation of the Chicago street traffic commission.

The committee, headed by Ald. Kells [28th], approved a proposal that the council memorialize the Illinois general assembly requesting statutory changes enlarging the city's powers.

1. Forbid pedestrians' mid-block crossings—jaywalking—anywhere in the city. Present state law forbids such crossings only in blocks protected by traffic signals.

2. Fix speed limits according to local conditions.

COURT RULING HOLDS TENNESSEE POLL TAX COLLECTION ILLEGAL

Greeneville, Tenn., March 29 (AP)—Magistrate J. R. Sentelle ruled today that collection of a poll tax is illegal in Tennessee and ordered refunding of $2.02 tax and penalty paid by a landowner under protest.

Sentelle's judgment was in a suit by J. D. Johnson of Greene county against County Trustee Bruce Graham and George McCanless, state commissioner of finance and taxation. Hearing of the case was March 24.

Johnson paid the poll tax under protest and had his protest noted on the back of his tax receipt. He pleaded that the levy of a poll tax against him was unjust, illegal, and against a valid statute of the state and the constitutions of Tennessee and the United States.

He based his plea on a contention that since the state legislature had repealed the poll tax, the declaring of the repealer law unconstitutional by the state Supreme court was in effect a re-levying of the tax by the court, a function not delegated to it by the constitution.

TRANSIT OWNERS UNITY PLAN SET FOR IGOE STUDY

Reorganization of the "L" and surface lines into a unified company under the so-called trustees' plan is now ready for consideration of Federal Judge Michael L. Igoe. Its sponsors believed yesterday it may attain importance if the metropolitan transit district plan of Gov. Green and Mayor Kelly encounters delay.

The trustee's plan was suggested by owners of the old series A bonds of the surface lines, whose holdings have a face value of nearly 16 million dollars. Atty. Carl R. Latham, representing these bond holders, said the court would be requested to add to the plan's provisions a price at which the city or a publicly owned corporation, within a time limit, might purchase the combined properties.

Latham said he believed the plan could be worked out much faster than the transit authority proposal and that the unified company would be in a position to give a clear title quickly when the city has purchasing funds in hand.

INVESTORS BID UP SECURITIES IN INCOME HUNT

Excess Cash Flows to Stock Market

BY THOMAS FURLONG

Competition for securities is pushing up market prices. Bonds are selling at the highest level in history and stocks have recovered to the highest average prices in nearly eight years.

The demand for investment securities cannot be met, investment men report. There is a shortage of securities, other than government bonds, in relation to the supply of funds seeking investment. With a diminishing supply of old securities and demand from corporations for new money relatively small, investors are buying every acceptable issue of investment bonds at steadily declining interest rates.

Interest Rates Set New Low

The average rate of interest on corporate bonds of top investment grade fell to 2.65 per cent last month, lowest recorded in the 26 years for which published data are available. The decline in interest rates has been uninterrupted for 15 years. Prior to 1934 the prevailing rate on top grade corporate bonds was in excess of 4 per cent and in 1920 was above 6 per cent.

Most new corporate bonds are being sold to refund existing debt. The majority of the issues marketed are smaller than the issues they replace as corporations use other funds to reduce their bonded debt. The result is that the aggregate supply of high grade investment bonds is diminishing at a time when the volume of investment funds is the largest in financial history of the country. As a result investors are competing for a short supply.

Two recent corporate financing operations illustrate what is taking place. Commonwealth Edison company last week completed arrangements to sell 100 million dollars of 3 per cent bonds. With the proceeds, and other funds, Edison on April 1 will pay off 114 million dollars of 3¼ per cent bonds owned by a group of insurance companies.

Excess Must Be Reinvested

Altho the same insurance companies are purchasing the entire new issue they will have 14 million dollars of excess funds to reinvest elsewhere as a result of the operation. As in many similar deals the Edison bonds were sold thru private negotiation, none being available for public subscription. The bond retirement is Edison's second in recent months. Last October 22 million dollars of bonds were redeemed and not replaced by new bonds.

Coincident with the Edison financing Laclede Gas Light company initiated a similar operation. It marketed 19 million dollars of first mortgage bonds and with the proceeds and other funds will redeem 34 million of outstanding securities. This will release 15 million dollars to seek reinvestment elsewhere.

The vast war financing of the United States treasury does not close the gap caused by the dearth of suitable private investment securities. On the other hand, as large investing institutions add to their holdings of low yield government securities, their need for other securities yielding higher returns grows more urgent.

Insurance Seeks Higher Yield

This is emphasized by the position of the insurance companies. They are among the largest purchasers of government securities. Forty-one per cent of the assets of the 49 largest life insurance companies is in government bonds.

Ten years ago the principal investments of insurance companies were urban and rural mortgages and bonds of railroads and other corporations, with government securities representing less than 9 per cent of the total. The investment return of insurance companies was about double that available today. The entire structure of insurance is based on the ability of the insurance companies to earn more money on their funds than is offered today by low yield government securities.

Other large investing institutions are under similar compulsion to get higher yields to carry out the purposes for which they exist. These purposes include the financing of educational and charitable activities and other obligations. In the competition for acceptable investments the individual investors and the smaller investing groups are likely to get little or nothing.

Investors Turn to Stocks

Investment funds of the latter type, not tied by the same legal restrictions as insurance money, are spilling over into the stock market, brokers report. Such demand and buying inspired by widespread fear that the purchasing power of the dollar will be permanently reduced by higher prices has contributed to the rise in stock prices. The sustained strength in stock prices has upset calculations of market forecasters who foresaw a slump with the approach of the European war's end and the curtailment of war production that is expected to follow.

Raising of new capital thru the sale of securities figures only in a minor way in the present financing activities of corporations. The absence of incentive for corporations to raise capital for new ventures pre-dates the war, stemming directly from a federal tax policy that bears down with increasing weight on enterprise in the economic field.

[Economic consequences of federal tax policies will be discussed in subsequent articles.]

Wins Tribune Award for Big Output Boost

BY PHILIP HAMPSON

Russell Stanfield, who helps make airplane engine parts, is the 32d winner of The Tribune War Workers' Award for notable service to his country by saving factory man power by increasing production. He is employed by the Ingalls-Shepard division of the Wyman-Gordon company in Harvey.

Russell Stanfield.

The presentation ceremony will be broadcast at 7:15 o'clock tonight over W-G-N. Presentation of the award, symbolized by a diamond studded gold pin, will be made on behalf of the award committee by Lt. Col. Don Eddy, assistant deputy commander, midcentral district, air technical service command.

Makes Crankshaft Forgings

The plant where Stanfield works produces, among many other things used in the war, partially machined crankshaft forgings used in virtually every type of fighter and bomber plane in service with the army air forces. The forgings are shipped in a semi-finished state from Harvey to aircraft engine plants in all parts of the country.

Stanfield, who is an assistant foreman, designed and produced improvements in a machine technically known as a centering machine, which is used in the production of crankshafts. The improved machine reduced the number of men required for the operation from 21 to six and doubled the former production of 336 units in a 24 hour period.

The centering machine in this instance is a device which drills holes at the ends of a crankshaft or other forging so that it may be properly lined up when put into a machine which does the final machining. It produces an exact center of gravity or balance in the crankshaft or other forging.

Make One Operation of Four

Under the old method there were a number of separate operations in bringing the crankshaft to the stage of machining performed at the Wyman-Gordon plant. Stanfield's improvement to the centering machine made it possible to do four of these operations at one time on the one machine.

So instead of seven men being required on each of three shifts to do the job, two men on each shift can now do it. The old production rate of 14 units has been virtually doubled and about 672 are produced in each 24 hours.

In connection with the centering machine improvement Stanfield designed a jig which permits two women to do a job that formerly required two men. His whole improvement, on which he worked both in the shop and after hours at home, has worked so well it is being applied to other production.

Obtained Skill in Factory

Born 40 years ago in Kirksville, Mo., Stanfield never went beyond grammar school. He got his mechanical skill the hard way by working in a factory. He has lived in Harvey since 1926 and has been with Wyman-Gordon for 12 years.

He resides at 15112 Lexington st., Harvey, with his wife, Helen, and his two sons, Donald and Ronald, aged 6 and 3, respectively. Three brothers, Art, Dick, and Wayne, work with him at the plant.

October Eggs Up 1 Cent Despite Big Sales Late

October refrigerator shell egg futures at one time rose 1.25 cents in active trading on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday. Heavy selling near the close sent prices down 0.25 cent, and the finish was 1 cent higher at 42.35 cents a dozen. The rise was prompted by trade reports that the army may "freeze" storage eggs to obtain urgently needed supplies.

G.M. 1944 ARMS DELIVERY RISES TO 3.8 BILLIONS

Net Earnings Gain 21 Millions.

General Motors corporation's deliveries of war products last year exceeded 3 billion 800 million dollars and were made at the rate of almost 11 million dollars a day, Alfred P. Sloan Jr., chairman, yesterday told stockholders. This volume was 300 million dollars more than in 1943 and brought to almost 10 billion dollars the amount of such deliveries since the defense program's inception in 1940.

Net income in 1944 rose 21 million dollars above 1943 profits, but the increase reflected the absence of any provision for post-war contingencies and rehabilitation for which purpose $35,466,846 was set aside in 1943. No such provision was made in 1944 because the present reserve totals $76,051,805 and "is considered adequate in the light of present conditions," said Sloan.

Net Sales Increase

War products represented 90.2 per cent of net sales which last year rose to $4,262,249,472 from $3,796,115,800. Dollar volume of war products in 1944 increased only 3 per cent above 1943, but physical volume of deliveries rose about 15 per cent, he said.

"From the beginning it has been General Motors' policy to reduce prices on war materials as rapidly as this becomes possible thru cost reductions as experience is acquired, manufacturing processes improved, and volume expanded," Sloan said.

More than 3,600 different war products from huge tanks to tiny ball bearings have been produced by G. M., he said. Unit volumes on some of the major items manufactured since the defense program began in 1940 thru 1944 include 140 million shells and casings, 180,000 airplane engines, 9,000 complete bomber and fighter planes, 31,000 tanks tank destroyers, and armored cars, 740,000 trucks, including amphibious ducks, and 2,400,000 carbines.

Many Diesels Produced

In addition G. M. has made a major part of all the diesel engines produced for army and navy use, Sloan said. G. M. diesels have powered combat vehicles, water craft, and auxiliary units in every war theater. To help transport vital war goods over domestic rails, diesel locomotive output was stepped up in the Electro-motive division.

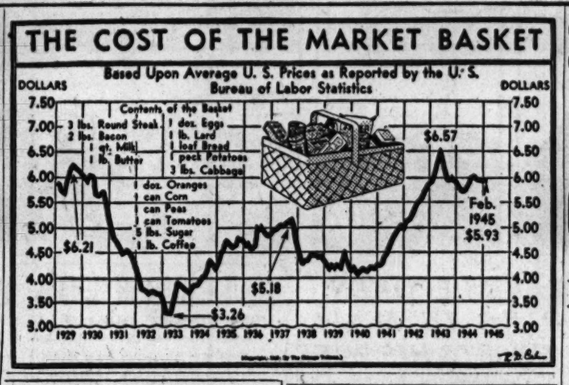
Renewed emphasis was placed last year on tank, tank destroyer, and armored vehicle production of all kinds, he said. Fisher Body division, which had produced more than 15,000 medium tanks and tank destroyers, was disclosed recently as one of the two producers of the new T-26 Gen. Pershing heavy tank mounting a 90 millimeter cannon.

Net income in 1944 was $170,995,865, or $3.68 a share, compared with $149,780,088, or $3.23 a share. Federal and foreign income and excess profits tax provisions amounted to $264,413,156, against $248,920,694. Renegotiation provisions totaled $61,700,000, compared with $64,600,000 refunded in 1943 under final agreement with the price adjustment board, Sloan said.

Inventories Much Lower

Inventories as of Dec. 31 amounted to $498,728,376, a decrease of more than 65½ million dollars from the 1943 year-end. Included were $110,379,822 of commercial products, a substantial portion being automobile replacement parts.

Sloan said an expenditure of 500 million dollars is contemplated for the reorganization and modernization of plants and equipment after the war. Business opportunities then must be appraised for their long term as well as short term possibilities, he said.



Stocks Higher; Trade Lightest in Five Months

New York, March 29 (AP)—Assorted rails, aviations, and specialties developed limited strength in today's stock market, but some leaders declined in the slowest dealings in about five months.

The ticker tape frequently stopped after an active opening. Transfers of 660,000 shares, compared with 720,000 yesterday, were smallest for a full session since Oct. 30. The Associated Press 60 stock average was up to 0.2 at 59.8.

A boost in the ceiling price on newsprint lifted Crown Zellerbach and International Paper. Sinclair Oil was propped by a large gain in net income of its Venezuelan subsidiary. Air transports had the benefit of favorable peace time prospects, but profit taking pushed Eastern Air Lines 3 points lower following declaration of an initial dividend. Morris and Essex was up 3¼ points and Lackawanna ⅝ in the wake of interstate commerce commission approval of the roads' merger program. Loew's added ⅞ as share owners approved a 3 for 1 split proposal.

BONDS ABOUT STEADY

New York, March 29 (AP)—The bond market held about steady today. Sales fell to $5,360,000 from $6,480,000 yesterday. The Associated Press, rail, foreign, and low yield averages advanced, but the industrial and utility each lost 0.1. Interstate commerce commission approval of a merger of the Morris and Essex railroad into the Lackawanna stimulated demand for bonds of the former at advances up to 2¼.

CHICAGO LIST ADVANCES

Prices were higher and turnover increased to 33,000 shares yesterday on the Chicago Stock exchange. Among volume leaders were Middle West Corporation, up ⅝; Chicago Corporation common, Belmont Radio, and Peabody Coal, each up ⅛; and Commonwealth Edison, down ⅛.

HOG OFFERINGS FALL TO 11,000, SELL AT CEILING

Receipts of hogs in Chicago yesterday totaled 11,000 head, the smallest run in six years for a Thursday in March. Twenty leading markets received 52,000 hogs, 14 per cent less than a week earlier and 60 per cent below a year ago.

Packers "begged" for supplies at OPA ceiling levels thruout the country. Nearly all supplies in Chicago sold at the $14.75 top, regardless of quality and weight. All sows and stags brought $14, the ceiling for the class.

Despite the acute meat shortage, packer demand for most classes of cattle was narrow. No strictly prime steers were offered, the best selling at $17. The bulk sold $14.50 to $16.65, weak to 25 cents lower. The lamb supply sold mostly steady.

FURNITURE MEN OBJECT TO OPA MARKUP FREEZE

The National Retail Furniture association has sent OPA a list of objections to the price markup freeze, charts on which must be filed with OPA by April 20, Roscoe R. Rau, executive vice president, said yesterday. Among them was that additional time is needed to file the charts because the physical task of preparing them imposes an "insurmountable obstacle in view of the man power shortage," the association said.

The retailers objected to requirements that they disclose precise sales volume and sources of supply, both highly confidential. The elimination of freight charges from costs creates many abnormalities and places a premium on local trading, the furniture men said.

Abbot Sets Up Research Fellowships in 10 Schools

Stockholders of Abbott Laboratories at their annual meeting yesterday were told by S. De Witt Clough, president, that the company has appropriated $50,000 to provide research fellowships in 10 colleges. The schools include California Institute of Technology, Cornell, Harvard, Illinois, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Minnesota, Ohio State, Purdue, Tulane, and Wisconsin.

DEERE & CO

With farm income expected to continue at high levels for some time, Deere & Co. sales of agricultural equipment are expected to hold at satisfactory levels for at least the first two post-war years. Costs have been rising, however, and the Deere management said recently that it cannot predict the effects of these difficult operating conditions.

In the fiscal year ended last Oct. 31, the company's sales decreased about 10 per cent, and total income before depreciation and income taxes declined 28 per cent, but after decreased taxes and renegotiation provision, net income was down only 7 per cent. This was equal, after preferred dividends, to $2.87 a share on the 3,004,362 common shares, with no contingency reserve deducted, compared with $3.15 a share in the preceding year after a reserve deduction equal to 41 cents a share. About one-third of last year's sales were war products.

In earlier years the share earnings were: 1942, $3.51; 1941, $4.03; 1940, $3.33; 1939, $1.82. The stock recently has been selling to yield about 5 per cent, assuming continuance of the $2 dividend paid in each year of the last two years. In 1942, $1.35 was paid; in 1941, $2; in 1940, $1.50; in 1939, the payment was 75 cents.

Current assets as of Oct. 31 totaled $164,067,381 and current liabilities $40,631,465. There is no long term debt.

FIVE ROADS SEEK TO SUSPEND I.C.C. COAL RATE RULE

Lexington, Ky., March 29 (AP)—A petition seeking to set aside an interstate commerce commission order reducing the freight rate on coal hauled from west Kentucky to Chicago was filed in federal District court today. A three judge tribunal will hear the motion April 7 if some agreement is not reached before then, Judge H. Church Ford said.

Five railroad companies filed the suit against the United States asking a temporary injunction suspending enforcement of the ICC order which provides that a rate differential for west Kentucky coal over that of southern Illinois be reduced from 35 cents a ton to 25 cents.

Petitioners were the Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy railroad; the Chicago and Eastern Illinois; the Elgin, Joliet, and Eastern; the Missouri Pacific and its trustee, Guy A. Thompson, and the New York Central.

GRAIN FUTURES RISE ON BUYING OF MAY WHEAT

Grain futures prices moved higher yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade led by May wheat, which sold at $1.70⅝ a bushel up 1¼ cents from Wednesday and within 2 cents of the seasonal high. Closing trades were ½ to 1⅛ cents higher. Rye was ⅛ to ¾ higher, corn ⅛ to ¼ higher, oats unchanged to ¼ higher, and barley ¼ lower.

Buying was attributed to reports that no cash wheat was available in Chicago for delivery, virtually all of the 2,656,000 bushels being owned by mills or the Commodity Credit corporation.

Confirmation that government agencies purchased 4 million bushels of cash rye recently for relief purposes in Europe and for the Belgian government caused some buying of futures.

STANDARD OIL (CAL.) PROFITS, OUTPUT HIGHER

Fairbanks, Morse Earnings Rise

Standard Oil Company of California last year exceeded a "well a day" program by completing 384 wells, H. D. Collier, president, said in his annual report yesterday. The statement showed increased production and larger profits.

Of wells completed, 295 were in the company's various California fields, Collier said. In addition, 121 were drilled in the Elk Hills field under the unit contract plan with the navy. Oil withdrawals from the ground were at an average gross production rate of 186,291 barrels per day, a 20 per cent increase over the 1943 rate.

Estimated Reserves Rise

"Large as this production record was, it was more than balanced by estimated additions to reserves during the year thru discovery of new pools, extension of old fields, and further knowledge of underground conditions," Collier said.

Net earnings rose to $43,467,997, or $3.34 a share, from $36,116,060, or $2.78. Profits were computed after setting aside 5 million dollars in 1944 and 8 million dollars in 1943 for contingencies.

Output of 100 octane gasoline has increased 800 per cent since Pearl Harbor, Collier said. Aviation gasoline production exceeded output of automotive grades in 1944. Increased quantities of fuel oil, diesel engine lubricating oil, and other products including a special chemical warfare material and special greases were manufactured last year.

Conversion to Be Easy

Most of Standard's war time facilities can be readily converted to peace time production, and new knowledge will result in improved products for the motorist and industry, he said. The company's research activities have included the development of methods for increasing aviation gasoline output and the improvement of diesel fuel and heavy duty lubricating oils.

Activities of subsidiaries operating in the Gulf states, Texas, Rocky mountain region, and New Mexico were reported increasing in scope and importance because of the development of new producing fields. A new subsidiary made commercial discoveries of oil in Alberta.

Standard operations last year assumed more of a world-wide aspect, he said, mentioning that three major fields have been proven in Saudi Arabia by Arabian American Oil company, 50 per cent owned by Standard.

Fairbanks, Morse Gains

Fairbanks, Morse & Co. reported 1944 net earnings were $2,845,729, or $4.75 a share, compared with $2,787,439, or $4.65. Shipments totaled $159,965,209, against $183,764,683.

Wacker corporation, the activities of which include operation of the Civic Opera building, reported 1944 net profit of $307,016. Altho the Civic Opera building is fully rented, and earnings of the Opera House and Civic theater increased over 1943, the building division had a $28,885 net loss, but the manufacturing division had $535,902 net profit, the statement showed. All Wacker common stock and about 10 per cent of preferred is owned by General Finance corporation.

LET 1,100 BRITISH PLANTS WORK ON PEACE MODELS

LONDON, March 29 (AP)—Preparing for a rapid shift to production for peace, more than 1,100 British companies have been permitted to do experimental and developmental work on post-war models in the last eight months, the board of trade journal disclosed today. Those authorized to add peace planning to war time output are engaged in engineering, road or rail transport, domestic appliances, textile machinery, electrical apparatus, clocks, watches, and radio. Of 1,300 applications for post-war preparations since last August, only 13 have been rejected, the journal said.

WPB Committee Urges Increased Trailer Output

Washington, D. C., March 29 (AP)—The WPB truck trailer manufacturers advisory committee today recommended more trailers be made this year. The committee suggested the manufacture of 26,000 units, instead of the scheduled 19,304 to meet demands for hauling essential freight.

Perkins' Coal Plan Rejected by Operators

Washington, D. C., March 29 (AP)—Secretary of Labor Perkins announced tonight after a series of conferences with John L. Lewis and the bituminous coal operators that the latter had rejected her last minute proposal for a new contract.

Lewis and the United Mine Workers had agreed to Miss Perkins' proposal which dropped Lewis' 10 cent a ton royalty demand, his major bargaining point.

Miss Perkins said the case would be certified tonight directly to the war labor board, the initial step toward possible government seizure, such as followed the collapse of negotiations in 1943.

Disagree on Extension

The secretary said the operators, after rejecting her proposed new contract to replace the one expiring Saturday at midnight, had also refused to agree on a plan for extending the current agreement for 30 days.

Miss Perkins revealed that she had suggested an extension with provision for retroactive payment of any wage adjustment later written into a contract. This same proposal had been made earlier in the week by Solid Fuels Administrator Ickes. The operators declined to submit this retroactive feature to arbitration either by private or governmental umpires.

Perkins said the conference would resume tomorrow as usual, but she acknowledged the parties would have little to discuss at this juncture in the crucial negotiations.

Drops Royalty Demand

She said Lewis had consented to drop his dramatic royalty demand, from which it was estimated the union would obtain some 60 million dollars a year, when she persuaded him that "that was a subject which should not be considered at a time like this." She said the question of payment of a union royalty could well be left for working out between contracts.

She explained her proposal contained a $75 allowance for vacation pay as compared to Lewis' request for $100. At present the miners receive $50 in lieu of actual time off.

The labor secretary proposed that the second and third shift differentials be set at four and eight cents as Former Economic Stabilizer Fred M. Vinson has suggested. Lewis had asked for 10 and 15 cent differentials. The operators had suggested four and six cents.

SIGNODE STEEL STRAPPING WILL SELL NEW STOCK

Signode Steel Strapping company plans to sell a 54,000 share issue of 5 per cent cumulative preferred stock and 40,000 shares of new common stock, a registration statement filed with the securities and exchange commission showed yesterday. The company has called a stockholders' meeting for April 10 to authorize this financing and approve a two for one split in the common stock.

York corporation has filed a registration statement with the securities and exchange commission covering $4,400,000 of new first mortgage bonds, the company said yesterday. The proceeds along with other cash will be used to retire $4,450,000 of 4¼ per cent bonds.

McQuay-Norris Manufacturing company registered 20,000 shares of 4¼ per cent $100 par cumulative preferred stock. The stock was offered for subscription to holders of common stock at the rate of one share of preferred for each 17 shares of common held of record April 10.

LIFT NEWSPRINT PRICE CEILING $3 TO $61 PER TON

Washington, D. C., March 29 (AP)—An increase of $3 a ton in manufacturers' ceiling price for newsprint has been authorized, effective immediately, the OPA said today and attributed it to below normal earnings for the newsprint industry. It is the third increase since newsprint was put under price control in March, 1942.

The increase will lift to $61 a ton the ceiling price for standard newsprint delivered to 38 port cities. Separate ceilings are provided for deliveries in 10 specified zones and these also are raised $3 a ton. The ceiling price for the base zone, No. 4, becomes $62.

The price was $50 "port price" from Jan. 1, 1938 until March 1, 1943, when a boost of $4 a ton was granted. This was followed by another $4 increase Sept. 1, 1943.

SEC DISMISSES UTILITY MOTION TO AVOID CLAIM

Philadelphia, Pa., March 29 (AP)—A North American company motion to dismiss it from any responsibility for claims made by Illinois Power company against a North American subholding company, North American Light and Power company, was dismissed today by the securities and exchange commission.

Illinois is claiming 26 million dollars from Light and Power and Illinois Traction company. Certain preferred stockholders of Light and Power assert that the claims are the result of mismanagement attributable to the top holding company.

AVOID 'UNCLE SUCKER' ROLE, BANKER WARNS

Burgess Criticizes Monetary Fund.

The American bankers approve the world bank proposed at the Bretton Woods conference last summer they are opposed to the accompanying world monetary stabilization fund because of its loose setup and other faults, W. Randolph Burgess, president of the American Bankers association and vice chairman of the board of the National City Bank of New York, said yesterday. He spoke in the Union League club.

W. Randolph Burgess.

Before accepting the Bretton Woods proposals, he said, the United States must "avoid first becoming Uncle Sucker and later Uncle Shylock."

Credits Brown for Good Bank

"The world bank has been well received," Burgess said. "It was well set up and there is a good reason for that. Edward Eagle Brown, Chicago banker, went to work on it and put it in good shape. We all realize that after the war private capital will be slow in getting into the various countries, so there is a place for government loans to aid in reconstruction.

"The world bank is built on sound banking principles. Its provisions suggest reasonable hope for repayment of loans. The bank passes on the advisability of loans and the United States would be able to veto undesirable loans.

"The monetary fund is a horse of another color. It has none of the safeguards that the world bank has. There is no maturity date for loans; the interest rate is low. It was built on the money pool plan which would permit people to reach in and take a loan. The purposes for which loans could be made from it are as large as a house."

Misuse of Loans Possible.

Burgess said proponents contend there are many restraints covering loans from the monetary fund, but actually the loans could be used for reconstruction and other general purposes.

"Russia is planning to use 300 million dollars for reconstruction purposes contrary to the stated purpose of the fund," he asserted. "If a large nation has such a plan how could you expect the small nations to stand back?

"We must have another conference to discuss the matter. We must have one on trade anyway and that conference could modify the Bretton Woods proposals."

Burgess said the United States and other countries face a spending spree after the war that probably will result in inflation which would be certain to be followed by depression and deflation.

Says Merger Would Cut Cost.

Urging that every possible measure be taken to reduce expenditures, he said the proposed world bank and monetary stabilization fund probably could be compressed into one organization. This would cut costs, he explained, and also would reduce a possible source of friction, as functions of the two proposed operations would overlap.

Because a 6 billion dollar operation in this country would mean a $200 cost for every family, every effort should be made to cut costs.

"In addition the American dollar 'ain't what it used to be,'" he concluded. "We now owe the world more than it owes us. We have been buying and passing out money all over the world."

RESIGNS OVER FUND PLAN

Baltimore, Md., March 29 (AP)—Expressing disapproval of the Bretton Woods monetary proposals, Dr. Matthew Page Andrews announced today his resignation from the executive committee of the Associated Organizations for International Cooperation, which indorsed the plan.

The Maryland historian said, "I could not remain on the executive committee of this organization now that it has decided to champion the Bretton Woods program as well as the Dumbarton Oaks proposals."

He admitted possible merits of the projected international bank, but said there were "certain definite dangers" in the bank's companionate structure for lending—the monetary fund.

Arms Chief Asks Constant Peace Time War Research

The development of weapons in the United States must continue thru peace time to insure proper preparedness for war in the future, Maj. Gen. Levin H. Campbell Jr., chief of ordnance, United States army, said yesterday.

Gen. Campbell spoke before a Chicago war production conference in the Stevens hotel sponsored by the 42 affiliated members of the Chicago Technical Societies council.

"War preparedness in the future will not be a matter of storing up vast stocks of war supplies," he said. "To be properly prepared we will have to maintain a high stage of development in the design of all types of war material. The problem will be for our scientists and technologists to keep up ahead of all other nations in the field of weapons development.

Arms Highly Specialized

"Armament development is a highly specialized science and often many years of research are necessary to produce the final product. This means that many capable research workers must devote their lives to the activity.

"The nation must be willing to pay a sizable insurance premium to maintain a state of technological preparedness. In addition we must be willing to pay to keep industry ready and able to shift rapidly to war production."

Gen. Campbell explained it is costly to maintain research in war equipment and also costly to keep manufacturers constantly in a position to shift to war output by giving them pilot orders and by insisting they have workable blueprints continually on hand for a quick shift to war items.

"Yet, however great the cost of such activities in peace time, they will prove to be great economies in the long run," he asserted. "The payment of such an insurance premium during the period between World War I. and this war would have saved this country billions of dollars and would have substantially shortened the present conflict."

He said peace time armament development would deter other countries from attacking the United States, knowing this country was in an advanced state of preparedness, and that in case of a war the United States could get into the field on short notice with the latest equipment.

Preparedness cost would not be all loss even if this country never had to fight another war, he said. In this war the scientists and technologists in designing for war have made many new discoveries important to peace time standards of living.

Procurement Cost 46 Billion

He disclosed that army ordnance is producing about 300,000 separate items, including more than 2,000 major assembled products such as tanks and guns, and that from July, 1940, to now the procurement has totaled 46 billion dollars. Production thru last December included 75,000 tanks, 37 billion rounds of small arms ammunition, 3 million tons of artillery ammunition, 4 million tons of bombs, 770,000 trucks, 130,000 self-propelled guns, 50,000 anti-aircraft guns, and 55,000 pieces of field artillery.

"At present the dollar value of our production schedules is larger than ever before and production totals for 1945 promise to be the largest in history should the two front war continue," he said.
